

Missile launch over West planned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If the Air Force gets approval, eight Minuteman II missiles will be launched over as many as five western states next winter and in 1975 with debris falling along the way to the Pacific Ocean.

The Pentagon said Friday that the Air Force is seeking congressional approval to fire the missiles — without nuclear warheads — from underground silos at Malmstrom Air Force Base near Great Falls, Mont.

They would fly to destruction in the Pacific after passing over Montana, Idaho and Oregon and possibly California and Washington State.

Previously the 5,000-mile-range missiles have been tested entirely over water from Vandenberg Air Force Base in California into the Pacific.

At least five "pieces" of each of the eight missiles will fall back on Idaho, defense officials said.

A 4,800-pound chunk from the first stage of each Minuteman is projected to land in northern Idaho. Four panels weighing 90 pounds each, are also programmed to land in the northern part of Idaho, about 220 miles from the launch silo.

The Air Force says, with reservations, that operation "Giant Patriot," the first extensive firing of missiles over land, should not endanger anyone.

If a malfunction occurs within the first 102 seconds after launch, the missile would be destroyed in the air by ground command and debris would fall.

A Pentagon spokesman said the largest piece, would be a 100-pound, 17-foot-long section.

If the destruction mechanism for the missile failed over land, it would fall as "an inert metal object" with the destructive force of a B52 crashing — 488,000 pounds take-off weight, or 244 tons.

The Minuteman missile itself weighs 73,000 pounds and the B52 comparison would be on the heavy side.

If the missile had to be destroyed over land within about 120 miles of the launching pad en route to the Pacific, pieces would fall over land — an Air Force spokesman said he couldn't say where. After 120 miles from launch and if the missile were destroyed by ground control, the pieces would fall into the Pacific.

The Air Force has predicted where the bits from a normal launch would fall.

"Most likely," a spokesman said, the pieces falling to earth would impact in federally-owned national forests where winter snows and ground conditions would make fire much less likely.

The track of the missile launches runs from Malmstrom across northern Idaho, enters the northeastern corner of Oregon and travels diagonally until entering the Pacific from the southwestern corner of Oregon, a Pentagon spokesman said.

Depending on which of the 200 Minuteman missiles is fired from Malmstrom, the spokesman said, it could

Airlines also continue cut-backs

GM to lay off 86,000

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors Corp., citing an energy scare that has sharply cut the sale of big and medium-sized cars, said Friday it will curtail some production early next year and will lay off 86,000 workers, 38,000 of them indefinitely.

Earlier Friday, American and Trans World airlines announced 5,200 employee furloughs because of the fuel shortage.

The G.M. production halt will affect 10 plants from New Jersey to California for as long as 10 days.

GM Chairman Richard C. Gerstenberg said 48,000 workers at the 10 assembly plants, which include the Michigan plants of Buick and Pontiac, would remain on furlough for as long as the plants were shut.

At seven assembly plants, the company said, one shift is being eliminated and 38,000 workers will go on indefinite furloughs.

The cutback by GM, which earlier laid off a total of 137,000 workers, was the latest in a series of reductions and layoffs that hit the industry in the wake of the energy crisis.

Altogether, more than 289,000 workers have been laid off, but many of them will return to work when auto production resumes Jan. 2 after a 12-day Christmas and New Year's holiday.

Gerstenberg said the layoffs and plant shutdowns were dictated by the energy crisis and forecasts that new car sales this year might drop as much as 12 per cent.

Earlier predictions of 1974 car sales ranged from 13 to 13.5 million, but Gerstenberg said latest figures indicated sales might reach only 10 million to 10.5 million vehicles.

The GM layoffs, he said, were the result of production adjustments away from big cars to the more popular small models.

"These adjustments," he said, "will mean elimination of the second shift in some plants, reduced production rates in others, as well as temporary shutdowns ranging up to 10 days."

Gerstenberg said car sales were hit by the Arab oil embargo that followed the last Middle East war and by consumer fears over the availability of gasoline.

American Airlines said in New York that furlough notices were sent to 2,800 employees Friday, increasing to 3,100 the number of workers laid off since

Simon sees 20% cut to stations

Moderate gas rationing next month

By ROBERT BUCKHORN

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Energy Chief William E. Simon said Friday that auto drivers face a "moderate form of rationing" in January because service stations will be able to meet only 80 per cent of the demand for gasoline.

The shortfall will be triggered by the government's fuel allocation regulations released Friday, and scheduled to become fully effective Jan. 15.

The allocation in residual fuel oil could result in a 6 per cent heating cutback in large apartments, officials said. But the new allocations boosted jet fuel supplies by 10 per cent for the airline industry which originally faced a 25 per cent cutback.

Under the allocation, service stations take a low priority, falling behind hospitals, farms, public transportation and industries which produce fuel.

Simon, who Thursday set up a standby rationing plan which could be implemented by March 1, if needed, acknowledged that the allocation rules, in effect would amount to a "moderate form of rationing."

He said that one of the key factors in deciding whether to institute rationing would be whether the gasoline shortage produced hours-long traffic jams at service stations.

Although Simon specified a 20 per cent shortfall, John W. Sawhill, deputy administrator for the Federal Energy Office (FEO), indicated it could be even larger.

In a briefing on the regulations, he said neighborhood service stations would be cut by "at least 20 per cent" of the expected demand for 1974.

The shortfall is being produced by the government's Dec. 1 decision to cut back gasoline production at the refineries by 5 per cent, using 1972 as a base level. Factoring in the increased demand in 1974, officials said the production cutback would translate into a 20 per cent shortage at the local level.

Under the regulations, the oil industry also must report to the FEO the amount of crude oil available at refineries.

When the information is collected on a nationwide basis, the energy office will allow refineries with excess crude oil to sell to those refineries operating below capacity. The purpose of the program is to spread the oil supplies uniformly across the nation.

According to the FEO, the crude oil allocation program would provide for "preservation of an economically sound and competitive petroleum industry," and would minimize the impact of the shortage on the entire nation.

Nixon cheered, booed at his doctor's wedding

LA JOLLA (UPI) — President Nixon ran a gamut of mixed cheers and boos outside a chapel Friday to attend the wedding of his personal physician and friend, Dr. Walter Tkach.

Accompanied by Mrs. Nixon and their daughter Tricia, the President sat in a front pew during the ceremony and told the bride, Cheryl Ann Gaillard, 26, she looked "beautiful."

The Nixons drove here in a limousine from the Western White House at San Clemente and, as they neared the chapel of the Bishop's School which Miss Gaillard attended as a girl, they passed through a crowd of several hundred people.

There were shouts and some obscenities. Several of the spectators unfurled banners, one of which read "Impeach Nixon" and another "Love Nixon."

Tkach, 56, met Miss Gaillard when she was the conference director at the Western White House.

The President was the first in the congregation of about 100 persons in the small chapel to stand when he spotted the bride, a stunning brunette in a long white gown, starting down the aisle on the arm of her father, Dr. Ernest Gaillard, a cancer specialist.

Others attending the wedding included San Diego financier and Nixon friend C. Arnholt Smith; the President's younger brother, Donald; former Communications Director Herbert Klein, and White House aide Ronald Ziegler.

Bork issues warning to gas gougers

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Acting Atty. Gen. Robert B. Bork announced Saturday that the Department of Justice would seek restraining orders against gasoline dealers found to be charging motorists excessive prices over the new year's weekend.

Bork noted in a statement that recent reports told of "gas stations charging customers as much as 99.9 cents a gallon" for fuel. "This sort of price gouging at a time of short supply cannot go unchallenged," he declared.

Another Justice Department official explained that, although his agency would continue to be on the alert for price gougers during the new year, Bork's order was aimed primarily at stopping the practice over the next four days, when the expected closing of many gasoline stations would provide "a better atmosphere for gougers to operate."

In telegrams to the nation's 91 U.S. attorneys in all 50 states, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, Bork set forth the criteria by which determinations of "excessive" pricing would be made.

But other Justice officials declined to disclose the precise standards that would be applied. "We're not going to tell you what the minimum standard is," one said. "We don't want to say to them, this is as far as you can go."

The official noted, however, that, under a formula determined by the Cost of Living Council, each station was required to post on its pumps the legal price ceiling as part of the government's economic stabilization program.

Any station owner or manager who chooses to exceed this price, he said, "certainly runs the risk" of finding himself the subject of legal action by the Justice Department.

"What may be flagrant in one city may not necessarily be flagrant in another," the official noted, a hint that the criteria for gouging would vary throughout the nation to take account of such factors as greater delivery costs.

Fuel situation 'critical'

'Crunch' may close many schools

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — As many as 50 school districts in California are facing "critical" fuel shortages and some may have to shut their doors, education officials said Friday.

Joseph Brooks, executive secretary of the California School Boards Association, said his office has received calls from school districts saying that if the present trend in fuel cutbacks continues transportation programs will have to be eliminated beginning in late January or early February.

In many rural districts buses are the backbone of the system, and it would be next to impossible to operate the schools without such transportation, an association official said.

"It must be critical," said Dr. Stanley McDouglass, field representative for the Bureau of Management Services in the Department of Education. "Many of them (districts) made it through December because of the Christmas holidays."

McDougall said at least 50 districts have contacted his office concerning shortages of heating fuel, diesel fuel and gasoline.

McDougall said that when school districts phone or write his office the fuel situation usually is in the critical stage. He said there are 1,034 districts in the state.

"Children exist and they have to go to school," Brooks said.

"If mass transportation is not available then private transportation with greater fuel consumption will have to be provided."

"Certainly as long as unessential recreational activities—such as stock car racing—continues to be permitted we cannot justify eliminating school children from reasonable transportation allocation."

"The situation is critical and assurance is needed from the federal government that school districts will be given priority allocations of fuel oil for transportation of children to school," Brooks said.

One of the school districts on the critical list was Berkeley's Unified District.

Jay Bradford, Berkeley's director of transportation, said he has enough diesel fuel to last through the third week in March.

"After that it is tough and go, or no go," he said, adding that if he had to shut down school transportation it "would mess up the whole school system." Fifty per cent of the 15,600 students ride buses.

Other examples of school districts facing fuel shortages:

—San Diego's school district has 23 schools facing heating fuel shortages. But officials say it has been a continuous paper work battle between the district and the Office of Energy.

—In Eureka officials said they have made a major change from gasoline to diesel fuel powered buses. Now they need a 47 per cent increase in diesel fuel and it looks like they may be cut by 14 per cent.

Talks headway seen

Associated Press

The United Nations announced some headway Friday in the negotiations between Egypt and Israel at Geneva on the separation of forces along the Suez Canal. But a word of dissent came from Libya's Col. Moammar Khadafy to any Arab peace with the Israelis.

Khadafy called for a revolution by Arabs to prevent their governments from making peace and suggested the Palestinian guerrillas lead the way.

The Egyptian army claimed its forces shot down an Israeli warplane at the southern end of the Suez Canal. The Israeli military command denied it.

On other principles. Clarifications were sought by both sides regarding details of these principles.

Khadafy's remarks were made in an interview published Friday by the Lebanese magazine Al Massa of Beirut.

He said the Arab revolution against a peace agreement should be spearheaded by the Palestinian guerrilla movement and proposed that the Palestinians seek alliances with Arab governments that reject peace with Israel.

Some Arab analysts in Beirut looked upon Khadafy's comments as

High holiday road toll feared

Combined News Services

Despite a record-low Christmas holiday traffic toll, the National Safety Council Friday held to its original estimate that 470 to 570 persons would die on the nation's highways during the 102-hour New Year's weekend from 8 p.m. Friday to midnight Tuesday. A spokesman said the council took into consideration lower speeds and lighter traffic — offshoots of the gasoline shortage — when it made its New Year's estimate Dec. 22. In a comparable nonholiday period at the end of December, council statisticians said, 400 persons would die in traffic accidents.

Basques tell of assassination

BORDEAUX, France — Four hooded men identifying themselves as Basque separatists claimed credit Friday for last week's assassination of Spain's prime minister and said they would soon return to pursue more antigovernment activities. The four, wearing black linen hoods, told 20 selected French newsmen during a 90-minute news conference at a secret site south of Bordeaux how they allegedly killed Prime Minister Luis Carrero Blanco eight days ago by detonating 154 pounds of explosives under his car in downtown Madrid. They said they then escaped to France through Portugal. On the wall behind the four as they spoke were photographs of nine Basque nationalists killed in recent years by Spanish police.

ANTAKYA, Turkey — Three young Americans convicted of smuggling 225 pounds of hashish into Turkey from Syria were sentenced to death by a court in this small southeastern Turkish town Friday. The court then commuted their sentences to life in prison. U.S. State Department statistics show there are 873 Americans in foreign prisons on drug charges, but Friday's sentences were among the most severe ever handed down to Americans. Although Turkey until recently has been one of the world's chief sources of opium, from which heroin is made, Turkish courts have been stern with foreigners accused of drug offenses.

BELFAST — A man reportedly caught in the crossfire between battling army troops and gunmen in a Protestant area of East Belfast died in a hospital early today, a police spokesman said. The man was found in the Shankhill Road area of Belfast just after two armored cars full of troops exchanged fire with the gunmen. Residents of the area said the man was caught in crossfire.

New Solzhenitsyn novel explosive

Combined News Services

Nobel Prize-winning novelist Alexander Solzhenitsyn, in a manuscript smuggled out of the Soviet Union, has published an extensive documentary expose of the Soviet secret police, prison camp and terror system, called "The Gulag Archipelago, 1918-1956."

Never in the history of any land, Solzhenitsyn contends, has any people so suffered at the hands of their government as under the Soviet system. He does not explicitly call for the downfall of the system but makes clear his opinion that without fundamental change, repression of the Soviet people cannot be ended.

There was no immediate reaction from Soviet officials in Moscow.

The book is expected to get wide circulation and discussion in the West. It is being published in Europe and North America. The New York Times, in today's editions, published the first of a three-part digest of excerpts from the book in an English translation.

Archipelago means a chain of islands. Gulag is the Russian acronym for the central administration of labor camps. In Solzhenitsyn's work, the title symbolizes the network of secret-police installations, camps, prisons, transit centers, communications facilities, transportation systems, and spying organizations that honeycombs the Soviet Union. Solzhenitsyn concludes the secret police are the vital element of the Soviet state and have been since its founding by Lenin.

Solzhenitsyn charged former Soviet dictator Josef Stalin with devising in 1953 a plot to harass, murder and imprison thousands of Jews. Solzhenitsyn said the former dictator whipped up anti-Jewish feelings in a press campaign beginning in January 1953 but died before he completed the plan.

Solzhenitsyn's new book consists of two parts of his seven-part autobiography. Unlike his earlier novels about life in Soviet Political concentration camps, "A Day in the Life of Ivan Denisovich" and "The First Circle," the new book marks Solzhenitsyn's first work using real names of persons.

Suggestion

President Nixon "should mothball Air Force One and travel commercial airlines on all his trips" to his estates in California and Florida, Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., said Friday.

Nixon went Wednesday to San Clemente by commercial jet with an entourage of 24, including his wife and daughter, Tricia Cox, valet, physician, aides and secret service men.

The White House said Nixon "paid out of his own pocket" his first class fare and that of the First Lady and his daughter — $644.01 which presumably could be charged off on the president's expense account of $50,000 a year.

The other first- and tourist-class fares for the presidential party cost the government $4,196.99.

Songstress

Margaret Eaves, a student of opera at the Cleveland Institute of Music, has been named "Singer of the Year" by the National Association of Teachers of Singing in New York. The award carries a cash prize of $1,000.

Miss Eaves competed against eight other finalists, who had triumphed at regional contests, in the grand finale at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

For sale again

One of Adolph Hitler's cars will return to the auction block in Scottsdale, Ariz., Jan. 5 for the second time in a year, its former owner said Friday.

Tom Barrett, a prominent Scottsdale businessman, said Donald Tidwell of Haleyville, Ala., plans to sell the car he purchased from him last February for $93,000.

Tidwell bought the car a month after it was sold at auction to another Alabama man who later failed to raise the money to pay for it.

Barrett sold two of Hitler's official touring cars at the auction last year — one for $153,000 and another for $93,000.

Mourners

Thousands of Mormon mourners filed solemnly past the open coffin of Harold B. Lee, their 11th "prophet, seer and revelator," as his body lay in state Friday in Salt Lake City, Utah.

More than 7,000 persons — ranging from youngsters to contemporaries of the Mormon leader who died Wednesday night at the age of 74 — lined up in sleet and cold winds for a last look at the man who led the 3.3-million-member Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints for 17 months.

Gouger

Texaco Inc. announced Friday in New York it has initiated action to terminate its lease with a Brooklyn retailer who charged customers 99.9 cents a gallon for gasoline over the Christmas holidays.

The company said it was seeking to terminate the lease with A.A. Gold Inc., lessee of the Texaco station because the retailer sold Texaco-branded gasoline to motorists at prices in excess of legal ceiling prices.

Texaco also said it has discontinued all deliveries of gasoline and other products to the station.

Albert G. Ralphs Sr., who pioneered the self-service market in Southern California and headed the Ralphs chain in the 1930s and 40s, is dead at the age of 76.

Memorial

President Nixon expressed pleasure Friday in signing legislation creating a Lyndon Baines Johnson Memorial Grove on the Potomac at the Lady Bird Johnson Park on the Potomac River across from the nation's capital.

The memorial will be developed by the committee for a Lyndon Baines Johnson Memorial Grove on the Potomac and the Society for a More Beautiful National Capital.

Speaking of the late president, Nixon said:

"Lyndon Johnson's long public career was devoted to providing a better life for his fellow man. It is fitting that his memorial in the nation's capital should reflect this fact and that he should be remembered in a manner that reflects the concern he felt for the quality of the world in which we live."

Mountaineer

Paul Petzoldt, still climbing mountains at age 65, Friday led his group of 25 climbers on the first leg of the annual new year's assault of Grand Teton peak.

Park information officer Tony Bevinetto said Petzoldt and his climbers will be watching the weather closely during their weeklong journey.

"We've had a foot of snow overnight here in Moose and more up in the mountains," he said. "And we've had some wind."

This is the ninth winter attempt on Grand Teton by Petzoldt and his graduates. Previous groups have only made the summit three times.

County's aid totals drop

The total number of persons aided under welfare programs in Los Angeles County dropped to 788,836 during November—a reduction of about 5,000 over the previous month.

A spokesman for the welfare department, which released the figures Friday, said the total number of persons aided in the county has fluctuated around the 790,000 mark for the last five months, indicating welfare rolls have "entered a near-stable period."

Spokesmen said there is no firm evidence to date that increased unemployment caused by the energy crisis has had any impact on welfare rolls. However, he said, the department is monitoring the situation closely.

In a related move, welfare officials said the first cost of living adjustment in food stamp allotments will become effective Jan. 1, with the average food stamp user receiving a 22 per cent increase over the current value.

Officials said that a household with an adjusted income of $300 per month now will pay $83 for food stamps worth $142. Previously the $83 bought only $116 worth of coupons.

L.B. police seize copy of 'Throat'

Vice officers from the Long Beach Police Department have seized a copy of the controversial film "Deep Throat" at the Roxy Theater and submitted a report to the city prosecutor's office alleging the picture is obscene, investigators said Friday.

Officers said it's now up to the city prosecutor to determine how the matter will proceed.

"The prosecutor can reject the report and dismiss the matter," a vice officer explained. "He can obtain arrest warrants enabling us to take the owner or manager in custody or he can arrange with attorneys for the exhibiting company to have the firm's representatives appear when the matter comes to court."

The police report states the film violates laws prohibiting the exhibition of obscene matter.

It lists the owner of the theater as the Sun Film Group, Inc., of Hollywood, and Nancy Jo Lindsey, 32, of Los Angeles, as its president. Charles Robinson, 45, 400 E. Arbor St., is listed theater manager.

The Roxy is located at 127 W. Ocean Blvd.

Honey seen as hangover balm, state reports

SACRAMENTO (AP)—Honey may ease the pangs of a New Year's Day hangover, the state Department of Food and Agriculture said Friday.

The department said researchers in England have found that a spoonful or two of honey before a night of revelry will slow down absorption of alcohol into the bloodstream and may lessen the next morning's aftereffects.

"Equal parts of honey and grapefruit juice, mixed with crushed ice, is reputed to guarantee a good night's sleep and keep away butterflies in the stomach and air hammers in the head the next morning," the department added in a news release.

She also said that because of the energy crisis the Recreation Department is limiting night lighting on game courts to two hours of play.

The child will lose his citizenship unless he resides in this country continuously for a period of two years between the ages of 14 and 28. The citizen parent should go to the nearest American Consulate and have her passport amended to include the child.

Where's Who's Who?

Early this year, a company called Who's Who in High Schools Honor Society in New Orleans, La., wrote to my son telling him he had been selected by his high school for inclusion in their "1972-73 Who's Who in High Schools." On April 24, I sent them $13.50 to reserve a copy of the book which would have his name and address in it. On Oct. 7, I wrote them asking about the delay and my letter was returned marked "box closed." I wrote again, this time to their street address instead of their post office box address but I haven't received a reply. Can you help? O.E.L., Costa Mesa.

No. The Postal Service has closed the vanity printing firm's post office box because of the large amount of complaints against the firm for non-delivery of merchandise over the past three years and they apparently are no longer in business. A spokesman for the New Orleans Better Business Bureau suggested you write your complaint to the Postal Inspector, P.O. Box 51690, New Orleans, La. 70151, and you may help "give them ore fuel" so hopefully they can start a fraud action" against the firm.

REACTION

Regarding the recent Reaction about the change in starting date of General Telephone's cut-rate, limited calls service, there is not a deliberate attempt on our part to delay the installation of metered service. The Public Utilities Commission originally set July, 1974, as the deadline for the start of the service for all of the General Telephone branches. Long Beach was scheduled to beat that deadline and begin the service as early as last month. However, in August General Telephone asked for and received from the PUC a delay in the starting date until January, 1975, because the company had developed a new proposal for how this service would be implemented. This new proposal must be approved by the commission, and a decision on the matter probably won't be reached until July, 1974. The January, 1975, date was requested because it will take approximately six months from the date the PUC approves the new proposal to install the necessary equipment in our central offices. # AEC stiffens nuclear plant safety rules

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) announced stricter safety standards for water-cooled nuclear reactors Friday. The rules could cost utilities more money or perhaps a cutback in the amount of electric power they generate.

Industrial figures used by the AEC staff to prepare an environmental statement estimated the cost to industry at from $195 million to $398 million through 1976. The rules climaxed a process that began two years ago and filled 22,380 pages of hearing transcripts. Utilities must comply in one of two ways: By cutting back power output or paying for changes required to meet the standards at full capacity.

Either way would cost money. Cutting back nuclear power output would mean they would have to add generating capacity using other fuels to make up the loss of output.

AN AEC spokesman said the most important new rule would make emergency cooling systems work more efficiently in the event an accident breaks the metal surrounding a nuclear power core. "The spokesman said such accident has never occurred."

The Ralph Nader-backed Union of Concerned Scientists attacked the AEC's safety standards, terming it "cosmetics" designed to cover up "the critical safety problems involving the susceptibility of nuclear power plants to catastrophic accidents."

According to the group, "fully one-third" of the nation's nuclear plants are idle because of breakdowns or operating problems. Despite this, the AEC, "has once again decided to side with the nuclear industry and disregard the profound reservations of its own experts in setting the stringent safety standards," the group said.

The rules will apply to emergency core cooling systems in nuclear power plants. They generate electricity through a fission process. Safety features must be built in to prevent accidents that could release radioactivity.

THE RULES are expected to be published in the Federal Register by Feb. 1 and take effect about six months later, to give reactor operators time to get ready.

The rules apply to 38 plants licensed to operate and 12 more expected soon. Most atomic plants in the nation are water-cooled. The technical term is "light water-cooled," to differentiate their use of ordinary water from the plants in the future that might use "heavy water" — water with its molecular makeup changed.

In addition to water cooling for ordinary operation, the reactors also have a backup emergency core cooling system using water.

THE RULES PROVIDE: — The emergency cooling system must hold the maximum temperature of the core's sheathing metal to 2,200 degrees if an accident breaks the sheath.

— The system must hold oxidation of the sheathing to 17 per cent of its thickness. Oxidation would be akin to rapid rusting in high temperatures.

— The safety preparations must consider shifts or shrinkage of the core fuel that would affect how quickly water could cool it in an emergency.

— The safety preparations must consider the effect of swelling of the sheathing (called "cladding") on the emergency system.

An AEC spokesman estimated the computer time alone could cost $3,600 for one calculation by one plant — and there were dozens of calculations.

The AEC, which voted unanimously to adopt the rules, said they will bring an "incremental increase in safety," which should be done in a way to avoid "unwarranted disruption in the nation's production of electric energy."

Oil 'no peril' to U.S. economy

By DEIRDRE DONNELLY

NEW YORK (AP) — Steep price increases for oil by Arab countries and other petroleum producing nations such as Venezuela are unlikely to have much adverse long-term effect on the U.S. balance of payments, top government and private economists say.

In fact, they argued in interviews Friday at an economics and finance meeting here, the increase in oil income those countries derive worldwide from higher oil prices could well find its way to the United States in the form of investments, which could actually help improve the payments balance.

"The Arabs will earn a lot of money from the price increases in Western Europe and Japan, which they will then spend here," said Herbert Stein, President Nixon's top economic adviser.

ance of payments, compares the value of a country's exports against its imports within a given time.

Both figures are designed to measure whether wealth is flowing in or out of the country. In the last few years, the U.S. has shown unfavorable balances — indicating an overall outflow of wealth.

THE BALANCE of trade, for example, showed a $6.35 million deficit for 1972. With the help of the dollar devaluation last February, which made U.S. goods more attractive in world markets, the trade balance has improved markedly this year, showing a $785.9 million surplus for the first 11 months.

The economists interviewed Friday said a key factor in measuring the impact of oil price increases was the fact that Western Europe and Japan are more heavily dependent on oil from the Middle East and other foreign producing countries than the U.S. is.

"THE PRICE increases in oil will worsen the current trade balance a little, but at some point that money has to be reinvested," noted George P. Shultz, secretary of the Treasury and chairman of the Cost Of Living Council.

The balance of payments is the amount of money the U.S. pays out to other countries, compared to the amount it takes in, in international trade, investment, currency and other transactions within a given period of time.

Howard Hunt free on bail

WASHINGTON (UPI) — E. Howard Hunt, one of the architects of the Watergate burglary, and his co-conspirator, Bernard L. Barker, were ordered released from jail on bond Friday by the U.S. Court of Appeals here.

Both men have been imprisoned nearly a year for their role in the June 17, 1972, break-in at Democratic National Party headquarters in the Watergate apartment complex on the Potomac River here.

They were released on bond pending appeal of their convictions for burglary and related crimes. Both have asked to withdraw guilty pleas upon which their convictions were based.

Hunt, as the leader of the Watergate burglars, was given a two-year term and Barker, who recruited several Cuban-Americans for undercover work against the Democratic Party, was sentenced to 18 months.

Hunt, a veteran CIA agent who was employed by the White House at the time of the Watergate break-in, has reportedly been under considerable strain since he was arrested.

Shortly after his arrest his wife, Dorothy, was killed in a plane crash in Chicago. She had in her possession some $10,000 in hundred dollar bills, money that allegedly was part of a series of payments made by White House operatives to buy the silence of the Watergate defendants.

The Hunts had three teen-age children who with the imprisonment of their father and death of their mother were left with no one to care for them.

Hunt complained bitterly to his lawyers about his treatment in District of Columbia jail, where he claimed fellow prisoners stole his personal papers. He was transferred to a federal prison in Danbury, Conn., after a scuffle with fellow inmates following which his doctors said he suffered a minor stroke.

When he appeared before the Senate Watergate committee last summer, Hunt looked gaunt and pale and said he had lost considerable weight while in jail.

Despite his problems in prison, Hunt published a book relating his experiences in the CIA during the Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba in which he played a major planning role. Hunt, who has written 45 "spy thrillers," has indicated he is now working on another book which reportedly includes mention of the Watergate scandal.

Nader tax body sues for papers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An organization which campaigns for tax reform filed a freedom of information suit in U.S. district court Friday for authority to examine the vice presidential papers that President Nixon gave to the National Archives.

Robert Brandon, director of the tax research group, affiliated with Ralph Nader, said he had been denied access to the papers by G. C. Gardner Jr., assistant administrator of the General Services Administration (GSA), the government agency which operates the archives.

Nixon disclosed Dec. 8 that he had donated the papers to the archives and taken a tax deduction of $576,000 for them.

He asked Congress' Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation to examine the transaction to see if the gift was executed prior to July 25, 1969, when the tax laws were changed to make such deductions no longer possible.

A spokesman for Brandon said the judge "may very well rule that there was no gift" — a ruling which could influence the congressional committee's deliberations. Nixon has promised to pay about $300,000 worth of taxes he saved by taking the deduction if the committee rules he was not entitled to it.

In his suit, Brandon said Gardner denied him access to the papers on the grounds they were not "records" as defined by the Freedom of Information Act, intended to give the public greater access to government records. Gardner said the documents were specifically exempted.

Brandon wrote Nixon, Nov. 21, asking him to waive the GSA's restrictions but has received no reply, he said.

'Ambiguity' in assessment feared, aide says

Nixon halts tapes' summary release

By FRANK CORMIER

SAN CLEMENTE (AP) — President Nixon has halted a planned move to make public summaries of some Watergate-related tapes, the Western White House acknowledged Friday.

Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said Nixon and his aides were "re-evaluating the question of releasing summaries of the tapes" because of a subpoena from the Senate Watergate Committee for what he called massive amounts of tapes and documents. Another reason, he said, is that one tape provided by the White House for use in a court suit was played at a recent Washington cocktail party.

Other sources said Nixon has made a definite decision against disclosing summaries of seven tapes that have been turned over to Watergate Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski.

The Washington Post reported in its Friday edition that the decision to withhold summaries reflected a belief by senior aides that the recordings indicate that, at the least, Nixon knew of the Watergate cover-up several days before last March 21, the date the President says he first learned of it. Asked about this, Warren said, "there is nothing in these tapes that is inconsistent with the President's May 22 statement" saying he had become aware of the cover-up on March 21.

At another point, however, Warren recalled that Nixon has said there "could be ambiguity" in assessing the tapes, leading different listeners to reach different conclusions.

The White House spokesman went on to say that if release of the tapes to the Watergate committee led to selective, piecemeal public disclosure, this "could lead to confusion in the mind of the American public and further distortion of the facts of the case."

In November, Nixon promised to make full public disclosures concerning the Watergate conspiracy, operations of the White House "plumbers" group, handling of an ITT antitrust case, political contributions by milk producers, and his personal finances.

To date, only the financial disclosures have been made, and in Washington, White House aide Melvin R. Laird said Friday there will be disclosure of documents dealing with ITT and the milk producers. He did not mention the Watergate burglary or the cover-up nor the activities of the "plumbers."

Asked if the White House now has decided against making any public disclosures relating to the "plumbers," Warren said, "I have nothing on that" but said Nixon's desire to clear up all Watergate-related matters "remains the same."

White House sources have reported Nixon will resist the Watergate committee's subpoena for tapes and documents.

"I have nothing to say on that subject," said Warren.

THE SPOKESMAN also was vague on the manner in which possible future disclosures will be made by Nixon. He said the President would meet with Republican congressional leadership on the subject and that the public would learn of the disclosed materials "sooner or later."

Asked if this meant the White House would rely on congressional Republicans to leak such material, rather than have a direct White House announcement of them, Warren said he did not know what the mechanics would be.

One Post story said two unnamed Nixon aides have told that newspaper they no longer are convinced Nixon was innocent of involvement in the Watergate cover-up.

Warren insisted that all of Nixon's key associates believe firmly in his integrity and his innocence and that "conclusion drawn to the contrary are erroneous."

Sirica told to review ruling banning tapes

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica was ordered Friday to reconsider a ruling that denied the Senate Watergate Committee access to five White House tape recordings and other documents.

Sirica ruled Oct. 17 that he lacked jurisdiction to enforce the committee's subpoenas for the tapes and documents. But since then Congress voted him the power.

The U.S. Court of Appeals ordered Sirica to consider the case in light of the new law. It acted on an appeal by the Senate committee.

The taped conversations were between the President and former counsel John W. Dean III on Sept. 15, 1972; Feb. 28, March 13 and March 21, 1973, sometimes with others present. The subpoena asked for tapes of two conversations on March 21.

The special Watergate prosecutor already has all but the Feb. 28 tape. Sirica had backed the prosecutor's subpoenas and recently ruled the tapes could be played for the Watergate grand jury with the exception of certain portions that the President asked to have withheld.

President Nixon allowed the new jurisdictional powers for Sirica to pass into law without his signature Dec. 17.

Two days later the committee exercised its new authority and subpoenaed nearly 500 tape recordings

Impeachment best for U.S., says ABA chief

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The president of the American Bar Association says he has become "reluctantly convinced" President Nixon should be impeached.

Chesterfield Smith of Bartow, Fla., said Friday that impeachment would be in the best interest of the country since it provided "the only due process forum in which the issue can be concluded."

"It is now in the best interests of the nation that the right to the presidency of Richard Nixon be decided in Congress through the impeachment process," Smith said.

Smith emphasized that his views were his own and that he was not speaking on behalf of the bar association.

MINUTEMAN MISSILE being lowered into underground silo at Malmstrom AFB, photographed over a decade ago, is the type the Air Force hopes to test fire in 1975.

MISSILE SHOTS Missiles

possibly pass over the southeastern corner of Washington and the northwestern corner of California.

The Air Force has briefed members of Congress on the project and is asking for $27 million to carry out the test.

A spokesman said the Air Force has always wanted to test its missiles from real silos rather than fire them from Vandenberg into the Pacific.

The Army has fired smaller missiles from the Green River complex in Utah and from Gallup, N. M., for distances of about 500 miles but no big Air Force missile tests have been carried out over land.

Some 70 tests of Minuteman missiles have been made from Vandenberg over the Pacific and "some" had to be destroyed within the first 102 seconds of flight, a Pentagon official said.

State and local officials along the flight path of the projected 1974-1975 launches from Idaho will get detailed briefings and safety explanations on the project.

Pentagon spokesman William Beecher said the purpose of the flights is "to demonstrate to friend and potential foe alike the capabilities of the Minuteman II in its fully operational mode."

Critics of operation "Giant Patriot" say the tests are not realistic because crewmen know too far in advance and have time to prime themselves and their missiles for the flight, which would not happen in emergency situations.

A missile launched from the sites near Malmstrom would fly over Teton, Lewis and Clark, Powell, Missoula and possible parts of neighboring counties in Montana.

In Idaho, it would fly over Clearwater, Lewis, Idaho and Nez Perce counties, according to Air Force diagrams.

Over Oregon the missile will follow a line drawn from the northeastern corner of the state to the southwestern corner.

The largest town under the path is Missoula, Mont. There are 200 missile silos spread over a wide area called a "field". A missile fired from a silo at the north end of the field would clip the southeastern corner of Washington. A Minuteman fired from the southern end of the field would clip the northwestern corner of California.

Libya, Iraq Oil said 'leaking' into U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A little-noticed congressional report says it is Libya and Iraq that have allowed some "leakage" from the Arab embargo, and the oil has found its way to the United States.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee, in a report released Dec. 20, cited testimony from George M. Bennis as the source of information about the leakage.

Bennis, the State Department's director of fuels and energy, was quoted as testifying that Libya and Iraq were the sole defectors in the total oil embargo against the U.S. erected by Arab oil states.

The report said "in the case of Libya, it is believed that some of its crude exports are still reaching Caribbean refineries for final shipment to U.S. markets."

But the report quoted Bennis as saying that the Libyan oil has minor effect on U.S. needs and the chances for the U.S. replacing its Arab oil through other sources are "virtually nil."

San Diego police armed with tapes

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Mini tape recorders are being added to equipment police patrolmen carry on their beats.

The devices will be used to record all citizen contacts officers make while on duty, Deputy City Manager John Lockwood said. The tapes will be kept on file for two weeks, he said.

The report did not mention the amount of oil coming from Libya and a committee source said Bennis did not give a figure.

It was also unknown whether the Libyan oil is part of the 700,000 barrel a day "leakage" mentioned recently by Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz.

No-weigh order on bacon set

Los Angeles Superior Court judge issued a permanent injunction Friday preventing state and local officials from weighing Rath bacon once it reaches retail market shelves.

Judge Richard Fieldew ruled that the inspections preempted and duplicated similar checks by federal agents and caused "undue interference to interstate commerce."

The county district attorney filed an $18 million consumer fraud lawsuit in March 1972, charging Rath with attempting to sell underweight bacon packages in violation of state labeling laws.

Rath admitted the shortage, but claimed that it occurred during a natural dehydration process between the Rath plant and the markets. The company filed a cross complaint arguing that federal inspections preempted checks by the state.

Missiles opposed by govs.

BOISE (UPI) — "Chicken Little couldn't be so lucky," said Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus after learning the Defense Department wants to fire Minuteman missiles over his state.

"If indeed they can control the missiles as accurately as they points out, why test them over land?" asked Andrus.

He noted the missiles, to be fired from Montana, would drop a first-stage of 45,000 pounds and four other pieces weighing 60 pounds apiece on unoccupied land in Idaho. The missiles also would pass over Oregon and possibly portions of Washington and California.

"That means with four missiles to be initially tested, Idaho skies will be raining parts," said Andrus. "Chicken Little couldn't be so lucky."

Andrus and Oregon Gov. Tom McCall both oppose the Pentagon plan. McCall placed it "in the same dubious category as the onetime Defense Department plan to ship nerve gas into Oregon."

"The plan is not valid," said McCall. "The Army will know exactly where they will touch down in the Pacific. If that were true, then it's a $27 million exercise to prove what the Army already knows."

Idaho Sens. Franch Church, a Democrat, and James McClure, a Republican, said they both wanted ironclad assurances that neither persons or property in Idaho would be endangered by the tests.

"In something like this," said McClure, "there can be no room for misjudgment. All alternatives must be explored before anything like this proposed test can even be considered."

Rep. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, compared the Minuteman missiles with federal bureaucrats.

"You can't fire them," he said. "It will be interesting to see if they (the missiles) will even shoot. But it would be difficult for any of us to make too much of a squawk about it as long as no personal property or lives are endangered."

Rep. Richard Shoup, R-Mont., said "it is a good idea to test our defense system."

"We are putting a lot of our hopes for safety in this line of defense and I think it is only reasonable to test it," he said. "I'm always suspicious of persons who condemn something before they know the full details."

Gov. Reagan withheld public comment on the launch plans until he sees the "environmental impact" report on the proposal.

Clyde Walthall, press aide to Reagan, declared, "he is reserving comment until he has seen the environmental impact statement which will be furnished to the congressional committees and to him, and until he has a thorough briefing on the test by the Air Force."

British engineers returning to work

New York Times Service

LONDON — Britain's electrical power engineers, one of the three labor unions whose job actions have jeopardized the national energy supply, agreed Friday to resume their normal work procedures.

The agreement, involving the 18,000-member Electrical Power Engineers Association, was reached as the number of layoffs in British industry because of the energy crisis climbed to 544,000.

The resumption of normal work procedures by the power engineers will enable the dwindling supply of electricity to be controlled more efficiently, but it will have no impact on plans for most of British industry to begin operating on a three-day work week in the new year.

The shorter week is being imposed by the government because supplies of power are inadequate to maintain full production. This is largely because of job action by the nation's coal miners and railway engineers, as well as the electrical engineers.

No progress was visible Friday in negotiations to end the wage dispute between the National Coal Board and the National Union of Miners. The union's ban on overtime work has reduced coal production by 40 per cent.

Coal is the chief fuel used for electricity generation. A four-hour negotiating session was adjourned until after the New Year's holiday.

"We have not made much progress, but hope to make more progress on Wednesday," said Joseph Gormley, president of the miners' union.

Meanwhile, British Railroads indicated that a settlement of its dispute with the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen also was not imminent. However, the nationalized railroad did agree to meet with the union and two others next Wednesday.

A ban on overtime and Sunday work by the union has seriously disrupted rail service throughout the nation and has sharply curtailed deliveries to the power stations of even the reduced quantities of coal.

The work slowdowns by the power engineers have been regarded as the least disruptive of the three principal labor disputes affecting Britain. Therefore, the resumption of normal hours by the union next Wednesday will do the least to resolve the energy crisis.

The refusal of the electrical engineers to undertake "out-of-hours" work for the last seven weeks has meant that maintenance and other operations required outside the normal working day were not accomplished.

As a result, voltage cutbacks due to fuel shortages at the power plants could not always be effectively monitored and the supply of electricity was subject to sporadic interruptions. Resumption of normal work will enable voltage reductions to be controlled more precisely. However, the accord with the electrical workers can do nothing to offset the impact of reduced supplies of coal, as well as disruptions in the supply of oil from the Middle East.

The Confederation of British Industry said Friday night: "Welcome though the settlement is, the C.B.I. is still strongly of the opinion that until the other industrial disputes are settled there is still going to be an overwhelming need to conserve energy and in the short term there is no alternative to a three-day week."

LAYOFFS SLATED

Nov. 1. American said it is trying to reduce its payroll 5 per cent below the 1972 level.

In Kansas City, TWA said it was furloughing an additional 2,900 employees throughout its system, bringing to 3,750 the number laid off because of the fuel crisis.

Pan American said it will lay off about 1,900 cabin attendants and 175 management personnel next month and also has cancelled the recall of 180 pilots who recently had been told to report back to work.

Another major U.S. carrier, Eastern Airlines, announced two weeks ago the layoff of 3,760 personnel because of the reduced flight schedules.

United Airlines also has announced plans to furlough 300 pilots and 650 flight attendants next month.

The new furloughs came despite a government announcement Thursday that an easing of the oil shortage will allow a 10 per cent increase in jet fuel allocations for the hard-hit airline industry.

Under the new allocations, effective immediately, the major airlines will get 95 per cent of their 1972 quota — up from 85 per cent.

"We are approaching the new government announcement with caution," an American Airlines spokesman said, "because it deals with an allocation but it doesn't say the suppliers have to supply us."

In December, he said, half of American's suppliers did not deliver the full allocation to the airline.

The spokesman said all of American's 2,300 furloughs announced Friday were ground personnel "from the New York headquarters staff on

Spike-booted thief steals telephone wire

BURNEY (AP) — There was a good reason why some customers of Citizens Utility Co. found their telephone service interrupted — someone had stolen their telephone wire.

Sheriff's officers say a thief equipped with boot spikes apparently climbed up a pole and cut down 2,000 feet of wire. The theft was discovered Thursday morning when three customers complained their phones were out of order. Company officials said the 800 pounds of wire was worth about $520.

Market strike talks resume; no gains

By MIKE JELF Staff Writer

Negotiations in the four-week-old Southern California supermarket strike resumed Friday in Los Angeles, but labor and management spokesmen said no progress was made.

Representatives of the Food Employers' Council (FEC) and the four striking unions said they would continue meeting today and Sunday.

Friday's session, held in the Los Angeles Federal Building with a federal mediator, was the first in eight days.

Negotiations in Washington, D.C. fell apart Dec. 20, and a federal mediator said at the time neither side was willing to make enough concessions.

The latest meeting ended with FEC spokesman Bob Voight saying, "not much progress" had been made.

Butchers' (meatcutters') Union local 551 spokesman Whitley Ulrich said, "Nothing was resolved. Wages and cost of living are still the main issue."

Main issues in the dispute are the unions' demands for an unlimited cost of living raise clause and a 3.5 per cent wage increase.

The strike began Dec. 3, when the Teamsters', Meat Cutters Operating Engineers' and Machinists' unions struck three major supermarket chains.

The FEC then called a lockout at 60 other chains, saying a strike against three employers was a strike against all.

an open call for the overthrow of President Anwar Sadat of Egypt, who was the first Arab leader to agree to direct peace talks with the Israelis.

Khadafy and Sadat agreed earlier this year to merge their two nations with Syria into a single Arab state. But the merger never came about, because of differing viewpoints between the Egyptian leadership and Khadafy, who heads Libya's government.

Khadafy maintained that Egypt lost the October war in the Middle East.

"It would have been better for Egypt to have admitted defeat and then preserved the right to resort to force again when the Arabs muster enough military power to recover their rights," Khadafy added.

The right-wing Beirut newspaper Al Jarida said Friday that a Lebanese politician just back from Cairo reported he had learned that pro-Khadafy officers in the Egyptian army had plotted to overthrow Sadat during the final days of the Middle East war, but that their plan was aborted. He added that Khadafy backed the plot.

Mineral crisis is possible, Morton says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton said Friday the nation is vulnerable to a "mineral crisis" but that he would do whatever necessary to avert it.

U.S. supplies of aluminum, chromium, iron ore, tin and zinc could be affected in the same way the U.S. energy supply was squeezed by the Arab crude oil cutoff, Morton said in a statement.

As examples of steps to assure supplies domestically, Morton pointed to a department pilot project to recover aluminum ingredients from clays and wastes; processes for treating low-grade iron ore; and increased research.

JAL orders 6 more DC10 luxury jets

By HERB SHANNON
Aerospace Editor

Japan Air Lines Friday announced a $153 million order for six intercontinental model McDonnell Douglas Series 40 DC10 wide-cabin luxury trijets from Douglas Aircraft Co. of Long Beach.

Deliveries of the JAL DC10s are scheduled to begin early in 1976. The trijets will replace some four-engine McDonnell Douglas DC8 transports now in service on JAL's international and domestic routes.

Shizuo Asada, JAL president, said the DC10 Series 40 model was chosen over other wide-body aircraft after careful study of all factors including engineering, operational performance, economics and lower noise level.

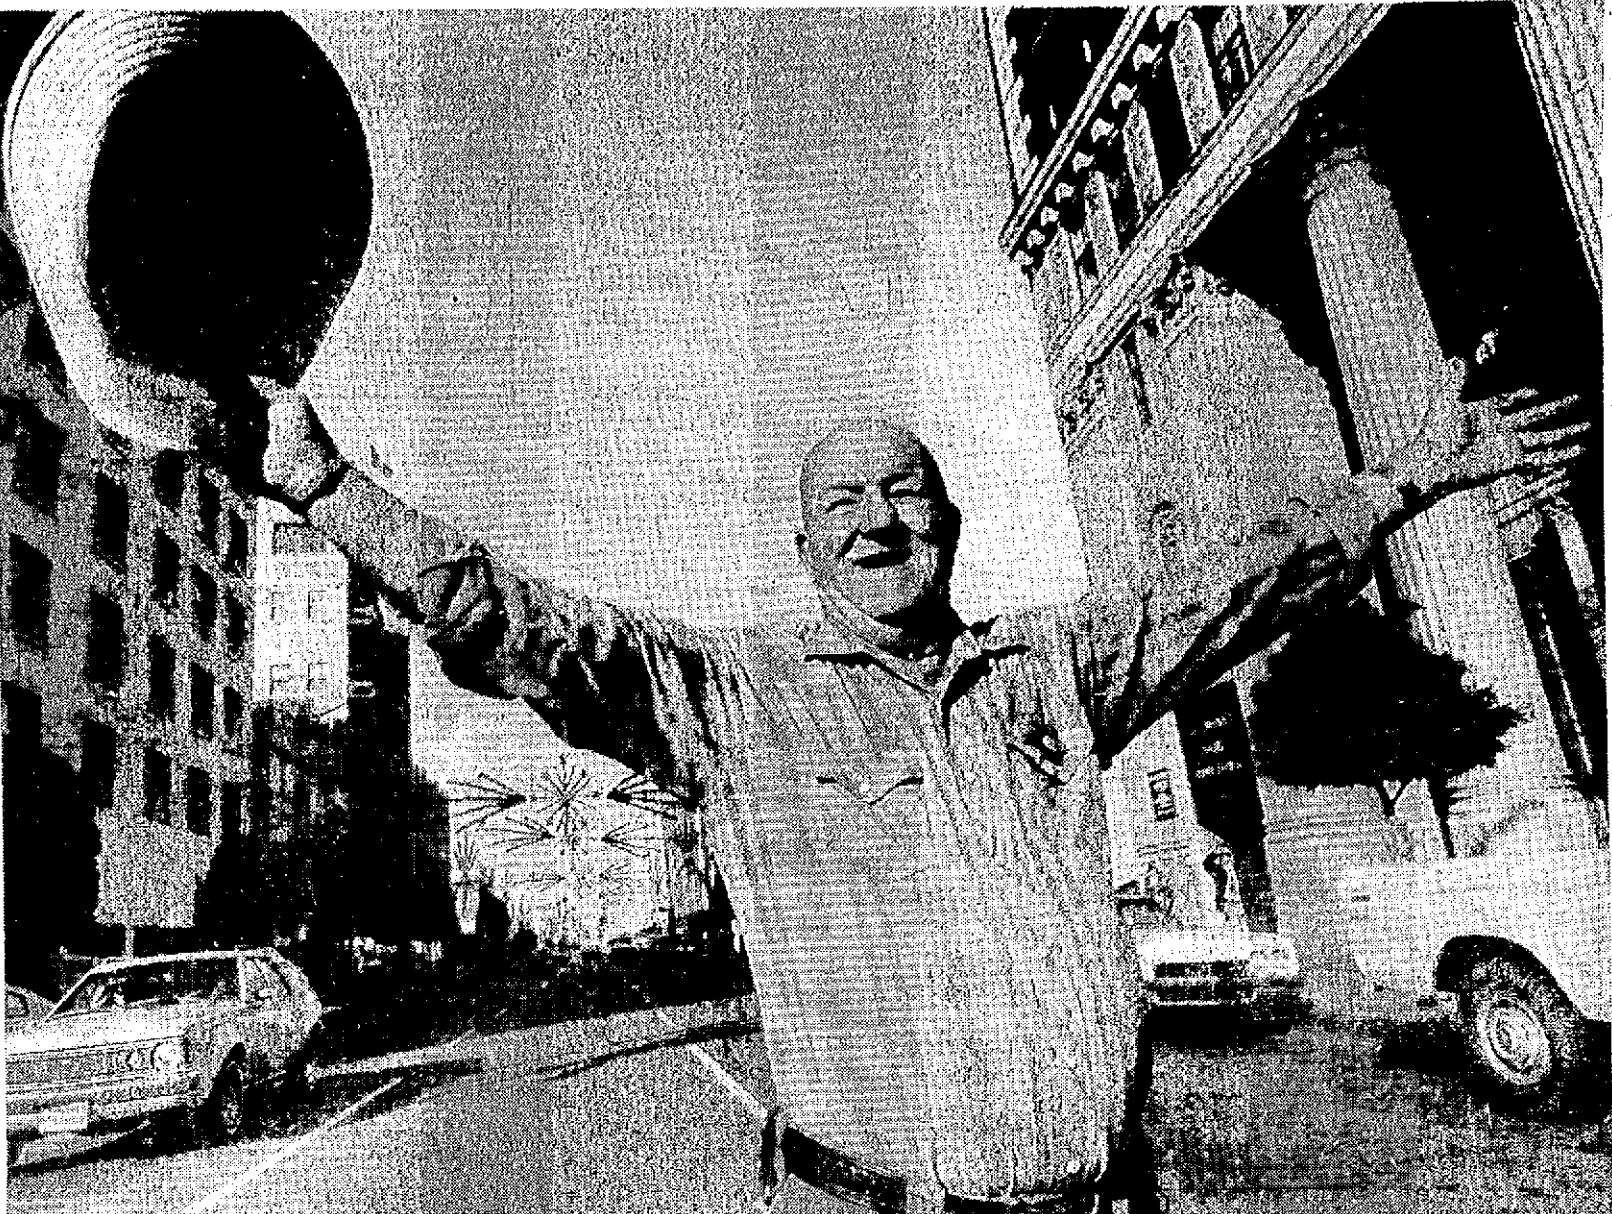

The Series 40 DC10 is powered by three 53,000-pound thrust Pratt & Whitney Aircraft engines and has additional fuel tankage for a range in excess of 6,500 miles.

Two of the JAL trijets will be configured with seating for 277 passengers for intercontinental service, and the other four will seat 327 passengers for routes between points in Japan.

One factor in the decision to purchase the Series 40 model was convenience in maintenance of the Pratt & Whitney engines, which are compatible with those on the basic JAL fleet of Boeing 747 four-engine jumbo jets.

JAL also announced it will switch some of its future 747 orders to the new 747SP model, a shorter version with better long-range capability.

The airline also agreed to extend its options for three British-French Concorde supersonic transports to the end of 1974. The previous option agreement expires Monday.

BIKE PATH OK SOUGHT

Construction of a bicycle path within the San Diego Freeway right-of-way, linking Seal Beach with the area around Long Beach State University, will be proposed Wednesday to the Long Beach City Council.

Dr. Alexander Britton, associate professor in the LBSU school of education and coordinator of special education, urged Long Beach councilmen to give the project "high priority."

"Such a project apparently is feasible, if both Long Beach and Seal Beach will cooperate with the State Division of Highways," Dr. Britton wrote.

The proposal contemplates fencing a bicycle lane adjacent to the south side of San Diego Freeway between Seal Beach Boulevard and Studebaker Road.

Dr. Britton enclosed copies of correspondence he has exchanged with State Assemblymen Mike Cullen of Long Beach and Robert H. Burke, whose district includes Seal Beach.

One of the letters is from H. Ayania, district director of transportation for the state, to Cullen, and it says that a preliminary review of the proposal "indicates a bicycle route could be constructed within the existing state rights of way."

Ayania pointed out, however, that the route would require construction of a bicycle bridge over San Gabriel River, and that this would "involve major expense in terms of available bicycle project financing."

"Because of this high bridge cost, and in view of the many identified bicycle needs in the district, we do not anticipate that we will be able to finance such a project in the foreseeable future," Ayania said.

Station owner feels like he's been hosed

By DICK EMERY

When times are right, it's such a pleasure to run a service station!

You get to pour gas and wipe windshields and hit the tires a lick or two with the air hose, and keep the restrooms snappy and help lost travelers with map problems, and smile, and smile, and smile!

Thus you help the happy motorists to head safely on their various ways.

"No more," said a veteran dispenser of gasoline, etc., Friday after-noon as he waved off one driver after another.

"It's the gas famine."

His smile was holding up fairly well, but smiles of the motorists were looking somewhat seedy.

Hear now an interpretation of the sad fix, from this staunch retailer, one of the thousands of service station owners hereabouts:

"For 17 years I've been working in service stations. Now I own this one and it's a big one and we pour a lot of gasoline."

Speaking is Larry Dodd, 35, owner of the Chevron station at Channel and Caffey streets close by the Harbor Freeway in San Pedro.

"The way it's working now, when one station runs out of gas, its neighbor gets the business. So the neighbor runs out sooner than he would if serving just his own customers and drop-ins."

"Your old friends drive up and you have to turn them away."

"They look at you as if you were a stranger who has let them down."

"This is hard to take. They are your friends."

"Today we've got these signs for when we run out. We hang them around and even hold them up. But motorists keep hoping and trying angles. They ask for just a gallon or two — and they smile and smile and smile. And finally they don't smile and they drive away."

Dodd, a friendly dispenser of gasoline and service, too, with a nice smile of his own, looked around the station, where four or five employees were mopping and sweeping and getting ready to lock up early because the gas was gone.

"It looks like it's gonna get worse," Dodd said.

"Motorists are going to have to cut down, voluntarily."

"In January, at this station, we'll be down 20 per cent from last year."

"Now, take an average station — average! — a 20 per cent cut means they'll be cut 400 to 500 gallons a day."

"Figure it in miles. Eight to 10's all these new American cars are getting. At 10 miles per gallon, that's 4,000 to 5,000 miles of driving, for the average station, per day. Those are miles that can't be driven. Count the stations and try multiplying miles!

'Unofficial mayor of Lower Pine' Hoppy 'covers' waterfront

By MOLLY BURRELL
Staff Writer

William "Hoppy" Chapman, 74, possibly is the longest term ex-officio mayor in the Southland.

Also diplomat without portfolio, drummer con brio, combination patrolman, father confessor, street philosopher and good samaritan.

And although he's never stood for election, never campaigned, never occupied a plush carpeted office or rapped the gavel for a council meeting, he's been the unofficial mayor of lower Pine Avenue for almost 25 years.

Actually, they started calling him, "mayor" so many years ago he forgets the date. But he accepts with pleasure the title and implied responsibility. They started calling him "Hoppy" during the Hopalong Cassidy revival and he was pleased about that too.

He inspects every foot of the two-block territory just north of the Long Beach waterfront at least once a day, checks in at each shop and cafe, minds the store if an owner needs to run to the bank or out for a sandwich. He greets all the regulars and most of the passersby by their first names.

A benign chunk of a man with a merchant seaman's gait and a voice Gravel Gertie would envy, "Hoppy" has a wardrobe of early thrift shop Western. The shirts are army khaki or cowboy plaid, the hat is rakish straw, the sheriff's badge is shiny brass, and a few keys on chains complete the accessories.

He claims he's been retired for 38 years, but he functions as manager of an eight-unit apartment building at 16½ Pine. There, in the former postmaster's office of the building that was the city's first post office, "Hoppy" works out on his drums when he's not making his appointed rounds.

He thumps out a fine John Philip Sousa march — "none of that jazz or rock stuff for me!" — with a gusto reminiscent of the days when he organized the Army's first Drum and Fife Corps in New York.

Since 1948 he's been overseeing his mini-fiefdom with the benevolence of a frontier ombudsman. He walks the blind across the intersections, directs the old folks to the right bus, helps the bewildered find the city hall or the Queen Mary, and visits the lonely in hospitals. Christmas day he had five invitations to dinner (most of them from lady friends) and spent the rest of the day cheering up bedridden friends.

He hears the troubles and sorrows of young and old, keeps a wary eye on city government, and has compiled a four-point program for improving the town he loves.

"First of all we got to get the PE cars back so we can solve the transportation problem," he declares. "Put those red cars back to work and run a network all across the Southland and you'll have this town full of people the way it ought to be. It ought to be the finest tourist town in the state with all we got here," he declares.

"Next thing we got to have is urban renewal for the low income folks — decent apartments for people who can only afford $50 a month," he says.

"We got to do something about the trash problem down here, too," he declares. "Some of these downtown alleys are a health hazard. Derelicts come in and empty out the bins and leave the stuff scattered. It's an open invitation to rodents and roaches, it's a disgrace," he asserts.

"And above all, we got to have more police patrol down here," he continues. "There's trouble right here on Pine Avenue — gambling and drugs and prostitutes — all in broad daylight. I see it every day," he declares.

Long Beach isn't the clean, prosperous town it used to be when he first came here, "Hoppy" says, but still "there's no finer place to be," he insists. "And it's up to those who can to help those in need," he says. "I'm a very religious man but I have my own church; I just lend a hand wherever I can. That's just the Golden Rule."

Would he ever run for mayor, for real?

"No, not run; but I might walk," he grins. "Running just poops you out. Walking, that's the way... You see more and learn more, and besides, you keep healthy," he concludes, patting his ample abdomen and striding off to his next inspection.

Church team seeks volleyball record

If everyone stays awake, the state record for playing a marathon volleyball game will fall into the possession of Long Beach's Community Grace Brethren Church at 2 this afternoon.

But the record — in California, previously 72 hours — is just an arduous means to an end for the congregation of the church, at 5885 Downey Ave.

Several of the young participants in the specialized endurance contest are being "sponsored" by persons who have pledged contributions toward a new bus for the church, depending on the length of the game, according to Rev. Ralph Colburn.

EVEN THOUGH the game is nearing its scheduled end, said the Rev. Colburn, several participants still are seeking additional sponsors. They'd like to raise $400 with the contest, he said.

To officially qualify for the state record, the two volleyball teams have been forced to keep at least four persons on each side at all times.

THROUGHOUT Thursday night's light rain, said Colburn, players doggedly went on with the game on the church's outdoor court until the competition could formally be moved to a nearby church with an indoor court.

At last count Friday, score in the game was 2,390 to 2,347. But those figures represent only the effort involved in capturing the state record.

Guinness Book of World Records specifies that the longest volleyball game officially on record went a whopping 155 hours.

"If they survive this one," said Colburn, "they'll probably try for the world record."

Paramount plumber duo makes White House list

Paul Newman, Hugh Hefner, Herb Alpert, Max Factor, Burt Lancaster, Robert Schlossberg and Alan McGowan.

They're all among the 575 persons named on the latest White House "enemies" list.

Robert Schlossberg and Alan McGowan?

What are they doing on a list with a musician, a magazine publisher, a cosmetics tycoon and two film stars? And who are they, anyway?

A pair of plumbers from Paramount.

Not the kind the White House used to try and shut off news leaks, but real, wrench-wielding plumbers.

Schlossberg treats the whole thing as a joke. "My partner's in hiding. He's maintaining a low profile," he said of McGowan, who is on vacation.

The pair operates Apartment House Plumbers, 14929 Garfield Ave., and Schlossberg turned half-serious when he predicted the "business" tax returns "probably would be" audited by the government.

One of the alleged purposes of the "enemies" lists was to single out targets for harassment by such governmental agencies as the Internal Revenue Service.

The IRS has said that just over 26 per cent of the persons on the initial list actually were audited.

Schlossberg said McGowan, of Sunset Beach, apparently wound up on the exclusive list because he gave $2,000 to Sen. George McGovern's 1972 presidential campaign.

But Schlossberg himself was amazed when he was first told that his name was on the list. A resident of Lynwood, he does not consider himself a political person and has no party affiliation.

"I'm a nothing, I don't much care one way or another," said Schlossberg. "I'm just an innocent bystander."

City offices closing on New Year's Day

City offices in Long Beach will be closed Tuesday for New Year's Day. Monday will be a regular working day.

The City Council meeting, usually held on Tuesdays, will be Wednesday at 9 a.m. in the City Hall council chamber.

Trash collection Monday will be on the regular schedule, but there will be no pick-up Tuesday. For the rest of the week, pick-ups will be one day later than usual. For example, the Tuesday pick-up will be on Wednesday.

Emergency services will be available Tuesday on the usual holiday schedule.

"Guess who discovered your crock of home made blackberry wine in the basement?"

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Sunday

Your birthday today: Introduces the most serene year anybody could expect to enjoy in these turbulent times. Intensity of your inner experience is reflected in unusual "luck" in gathering material resources, with little special effort. Relationships tend to drift along pleasantly enough. Today's natives have excellent memories for anything that intrigues them, often achieve positions of public trust.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Let well enough alone, once you have fulfilled your community's expectations. Your favorite hobby brings much enjoyment, relaxation.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): There's no point in going out of your way or to special expense to please anybody but yourself as your true friends are all willing to share things as they are.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Keep an open schedule and if little happens, fine. Time for prayer, meditation, and simple rest is well spent. Later hours bring rising energy.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): First things first: your obligations, any promises now due for redemption. Then take up unfinished business before you get into new and dubious pursuits.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Make a good appearance bright and early, help your home looks and neighborhood to see the message of Sunday. Otherwise, taking it easy is the thing to do.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Lay aside some of your customary attention to trivial details. In most of today's concerns, that is exactly what they are - trivial.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): What you must do should be done without complaint. Evening hours find you rollicking merrily along in a social mood, preferably with a few old friends.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): It's time you stopped a moment to take a good look at where you are in your life, what you are becoming as you get from one day to another.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Make the rounds of your home and neighborhood seeking ways of making daily living fuller, more for an evening party.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Nostalgia is the typical mood of this easygoing Sunday. Just be sure the past was really what you are becoming as you get from one day to another.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): An uneventful Sunday of genuine personal rest, generously inspired by prayer. Give others the freedom to pursue happiness in their particular styles.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Give some thought to planning the coming year, but let the resolutions be simple and feasible. It's better to make none than set yourself up an impossible goal.

Centralized oil buying sought

Mayor Thomas Bradley of Los Angeles suggested Friday that President Nixon limit the rise in oil prices by centralizing in one federal agency the purchases of foreign oil.

Bradley wrote Nixon that the Los Angeles Department of Water and Power and other such agencies have been faced with escalating costs of oil on the world market.

He contended that oil dealers are "taking advantage of the emergency to manipulate prices paid by domestic consumers to higher and higher levels."

"Often promoters will offer the same oil to three or four potential customers, boosting the asking price until the highest firm bid is received, and will then sell to that purchaser."

He said the DWP has been paying as much as $17 to $18 a barrel for oil and in one case paid $25 a barrel for Peruvian oil with an extremely low sulphur content.

Bradley conceded that the federal government cannot control world oil prices but said centralized central purchasing would ease the "inflationary pressures of domestic competition." He said this oil could be distributed to utilities under the federal allocation program.

Man bound over in rape-robbery case

A 25-year-old Compton auto wrecker Friday was bound over for Superior Court arraignment on five felony counts in connection with a Dec. 18 robbery in North Long Beach during which a bar maid was raped and a male customer shot in the back of the head.

Roy Pink, of 1604 N. Chester Ave., was ordered to appear Jan. 11 to answer to two counts of armed robbery, two counts of assault with a deadly weapon and one count of rape.

Judge W.H. Winston remanded Pink to sheriff's custody in lieu of $25,000 bail following the defendant's preliminary hearing in Municipal Court.

The hearing was marred by Pink's repeated objections he was being "railroaded" because Winston would not grant the defendant's request that the hearing be delayed to enable Pink to retain private counsel.

Pink made the request at the beginning of the 2½-hour hearing, saying he was dissatisfied with Public Defender Les McMillan's handling of the case. Winston said he denied the motion on grounds it should have been made sooner.

Seaman charged in policeman's assault

Richard David Smith, 48, of 431 N. Avalon Blvd., Wilmington, a merchant seaman, was charged Friday with assault with a deadly weapon on a police officer.

The charge grows out of an alleged incident at Smith's apartment, Thursday, in which officers were called to the neighborhood by reports of shooting.

Smith was allegedly standing outside the front door of his upstairs apartment firing a pistol. He was struck in the right arm by a shot fired by police Sgt. Ernest Munoz of Harbor Division, police said. The bullet knocked a pistol from Smith's hand, police said.

Arraignment of Smith is to be delayed until medical clearance can be given for his appearance in court. He is in the hospital for treatment of the bullet wound.

Police said Smith and several neighbors had quarreled and Smith had fired four shots before police arrived. Smith fired twice more, police said, after Munoz had ordered him to drop the pistol.

Mental health officials get sex offender

Earl S. Rode, a 38-year-old unemployed carpenter who pleaded guilty to charges of molesting a 12-year-old East Long Beach girl last Sept. 14, Friday was ruled a mentally disordered sex offender sent to the state Dept. of Mental Hygiene for an indefinite term.

Superior Court Judge Ellsworth Beam's decision followed a closed hearing to determine Rode's mental state. Mental hygiene officials will further examine the defendant and recommend treatment which could include commitment to a state hospital.

Rode pleaded guilty Nov. 27 to two charges of committing lewd acts on his victim and one count of oral copulation. He was originally charged with nine felony counts in connection with the case.

A playmate told police she saw the victim get into the defendant's car and told the girl's parents. The girl and the car became the subject of a city-wide search for more than 18 hours until police spotted the car near the intersection of Pacific Coast Highway and Second Street.

County energy cuts asked

The county's newly-formed Energy Commission Friday voted 11-3 to urge supervisors to impose on the 1 million residents of unincorporated territory similar energy controls to those imposed recently by the City of Los Angeles.

The commission also urged supervisors to seek state legislation which would enable the board to enforce such controls, in light of the fact the board now does not have that power.

The commission action also called for the county to seek the cooperation of the Southern California Association of Governments (SCAG) and independent cities in the county to "provide leadership by showing the county was prepared to take action in controlling energy waste."

The commission action occurred during a four-hour session which centered mainly on the fact that the county cannot summarily impose penalties and restrictions on its residents since—unlike the City of Los Angeles—it does not control a utility that supplies power.

Some members pointed out that the City of Los Angeles can enforce controls because the Department of Water and Power, an arm of the city, provides residents with power. In unincorporated territory residents are supplied by the Southern California Edison Company, which is not facing the same crisis as the city department, and which is under the jurisdiction of the state Public Utilities Commission.

Even while commission members were urging mandatory controls in county areas, Supervisor Kenneth Hahn was urging the City of Los Angeles to exempt from its stringent measures three county hospitals served by the Department of Water and Power (DWP).

Hahn pointed out that the County-USC Medical Center, the John Wesley Hospital and Olive View Mid-Valley Hospital are classified as commercial users under the city's conservation ordinance, which requires that they achieve a 20 per cent energy cutback now and a 33 per cent cutback by the middle of January.

"This would make some surgeries totally impossible," Hahn said. And because of this, he urged the city to reclassify the hospitals as industrial users, which would allow them to reduce energy by 10 per cent initially and only 16 per cent by mid-January.

Hahn said county health officials have told him they could maintain critical services at the hospitals if they are allowed the lesser reductions.

In another energy issue, the commission postponed until Friday its planned review of the granting of variances to Burbank, Glendale and Pasadena which would allow the three cities to burn high-sulfur fuel as a means of averting rolling blackouts.

Glendale earlier this week was granted a 60 day variance by the Air Pollution Control Hearing Board to burn high-sulfur fuel because that city faced an imminent crisis with stocks of low-sulfur fuel nearing the depletion level early in January.

Commissioners decided they would ask hearing board officials to appear at next Friday's meeting to discuss the impact on pollution levels caused by the burning of high-sulfur fuel.

Probation check delays hearing

Preliminary hearing for a 22-year-old Huntington Beach woman charged with marijuana possession Friday was delayed in Long Beach Municipal Court for 30 days pending determination of her eligibility for probation as a first-time offender.

Kathryn Lynn Keithley, who listed a Huntington Beach motel as her residence, was arrested Dec. 17 after a blazing gun battle in which her 30-year-old male companion was killed by police.

Miss Keithley was charged with possession of five small bags of marijuana found in the bullet-riddled car in which Ronald L. Virgin was fatally wounded after trading shots with robbery detectives.

Police said the woman, who was unharmed in the exchange, did not participate in the gun battle.

Miss Keithley could qualify for probation if investigators determine she has never been convicted of a drug-related offense. Her probation report will be reviewed in Dept. 2 of Long Beach Municipal Court Jan. 28. The defendant remained in sheriff's custody in lieu of $1,500 bail.

Virgin was wanted for questioning about a murder attempt in Huntington Beach and was a robbery fugitive from Oklahoma and Texas. Police said Virgin also was a suspect in five Long Beach robberies in the past two months.

Binoculars stolen

Binoculars, a cassette tape player and other items, valued at $117, were taken from Daniel R. Williams' car while it was parked in the 1600 block of West Water Street, Long Beach, police reported Friday.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON Forecast for Sunday

Your birthday today: Introduces the most serene year anybody could expect to enjoy in these turbulent times. Intensity of your inner experience is reflected in unusual "luck" in gathering material resources, with little special effort. Relationships tend to drift along pleasantly enough. Today's raves have excellent memories for anything that intrigues them, often achieve positions of public trust.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Let well enough alone, once you have fulfilled your community's expectations. Your favorite hobby brings much enjoyment, relaxation.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): There's no point in going out of your way or to special expense to please anybody but yourself, as your true friends are all willing to share things as they are.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Keep an open schedule and if little happens, fine. Time for prayer, meditation, and simple rest is well spent. Later hours bring rising energy.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): First things first: your obligations, any promises now due for redemption. Then take up unfinished business before you get into new and dubious pursuits.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Make a good appearance bright and early, help your home folks and neighborhood to see the message of Sunday. Otherwise, taking it easy is the thing to do.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Lay aside some of your customary attention to trivial details. In most of today's concerns, that is exactly what they are - trivial.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): What you must do should be done without complaint. Evening hours find you rollicking merrily along in a social mood, preferably with a few old friends.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): It's time you stopped a moment to take a good look at where you are in your life, what you are becoming as you get from one day to another.

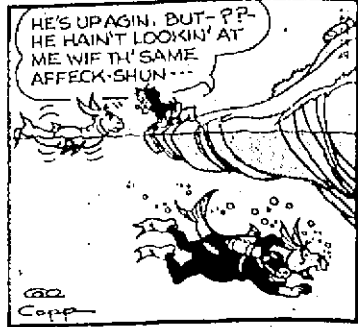

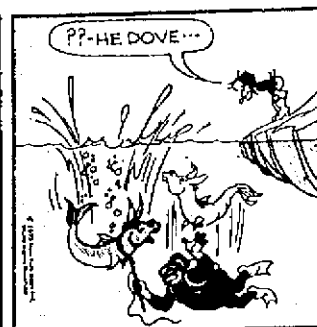

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Make the rounds of your home and neighborhood seeking ways of making daily living fuller, more enjoyable. Gather good friends for an evening party.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Nostalgia is the typical mood of this easygoing Sunday. Just be sure the past was really what you now recall or realize that you are idealizing.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): An uneventful Sunday of genuine personal rest, generously inspired by prayer. Give others the freedom to pursue happiness in their particular styles.

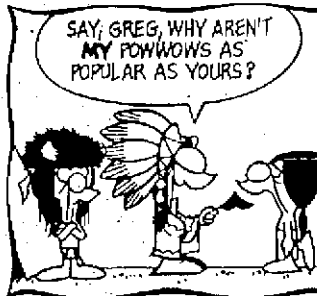

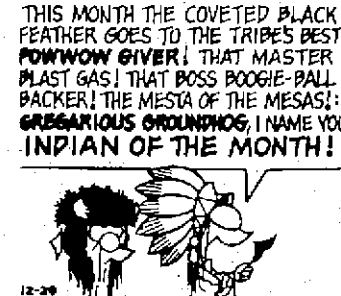

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Give some thought to planning the coming year, but let the resolutions be simple and feasible. It's better to make none than set yourself up an impossible goal.

Centralized oil buying sought

Mayor Thomas Bradley of Los Angeles suggested Friday that President Nixon limit the rise in oil prices by centralizing in one federal agency the purchases of foreign oil.

Bradley wrote Nixon that the Los Angeles Department of Water and Power and other such agencies have been faced with escalating costs of oil on the world market.

He contended that oil dealers are "taking advantage of the emergency to manipulate prices paid by domestic consumers to higher and higher levels."

"Often promoters will offer the same oil to three or four potential customers, boosting the asking price until the highest firm bid is received, and will then sell to that purchaser."

He said the DWP has been paying as much as $17 to $18 a barrel for oil and in one case paid $25 a barrel for Peruvian oil with an extremely low sulphur content.

Bradley conceded that the federal government cannot control world oil prices but said centralized central purchasing would ease the "inflationary pressures of domestic competition." He said this oil could be distributed to utilities under the federal allocation program.

Man bound over in rape-robbery case

A 25-year-old Compton auto wrecker Friday was bound over for Superior Court arraignment on five felony counts in connection with a Dec. 18 robbery in North Long Beach during which a bar maid was raped and a male customer shot in the back of the head.

Roy Pink, of 1604 N. Chester Ave., was ordered to appear Jan. 11 to answer to two counts of armed robbery, two counts of assault with a deadly weapon and one count of rape.

Judge W.H. Winston remanded Pink to sheriff's custody in lieu of $25,000 bail following the defendant's preliminary hearing in Municipal Court.

The hearing was marred by Pink's repeated objections he was being "railroaded" because Winston would not grant the defendant's request that the hearing be delayed to enable Pink to retain private counsel.

Pink made the request at the beginning of the 2½-hour hearing, saying he was dissatisfied with Public Defender Les McMullan's handling of the case. Winston said he denied the motion on grounds it should have been made sooner.

Testimony Friday included descriptions by the bar maid and a 46-year-old Carson truck driver of how a man robbed the Bamboo Den, 6344 Long Beach Blvd., raped the woman and shot the man in the back of the head before fleeing.

Wearing a large white surgical dressing across the base of his skull, David Knittle testified the bandit took an estimated $15,000 as he was forced to lie at gunpoint on the barroom floor.

Knittle said he was carrying the large amount of money because he intended to drive a tractor-trailer to Sacramento later in the day and needed the cash for expenses.

Another witness, said he walked into the bar about 12:45 a.m. and ordered a beer, but a man holding a gun told him the bar was closed. The witness said he left and called police.

Office Allen Ice said he arrested the defendant after spotting a pair of hands inside a storage shed at the rear of the bar. Ice said police also found a wallet belonging to Knittle and a pistol on the floor of the shed and an estimated $1,400 cash in the defendant's pockets.

Seaman charged in policeman's assault

Richard David Smith, 48, of 431 N. Avalon Blvd., Wilmington, a merchant seaman, was charged Friday with assault with a deadly weapon on a police officer.

The charge grows out of an alleged incident at Smith's apartment, Thursday, in which officers were called to the neighborhood by reports of shooting.

Smith was allegedly standing outside the front door of his upstairs apartment firing a pistol. He was struck in the right arm by a shot fired by police Sgt. Ernest Munoz of Harbor Division, police said. The bullet knocked a pistol from Smith's hand, police said.

Arraignment of Smith is to be delayed until medical clearance can be given for his appearance in court. He is in the hospital for treatment of the bullet wound.

Police said Smith and several neighbors had quarreled and Smith had fired four shots before police arrived. Smith fired twice more, police said, after Munoz had ordered him to drop the pistol.

Simmons to direct State Air Board
SACRAMENTO (UPI)—William Simmons, 37, Friday was named executive officer of the California Air Resources Board at a salary of $31,116 per year.

Simmons, who has been staff counsel for the Air Resources Board since 1971, succeeds John A. Maga, who was appointed deputy secretary of the resources agency earlier this month.

Rode pleaded guilty Nov. 27 to two charges of committing lewd acts on his victim and one count of oral copulation. He was originally charged with nine felony counts in connection with the case.

A playmate told police she saw the victim get into the defendant's car and told the girl's parents. The girl and the car became the subject of a city-wide search for more than 18 hours until police spotted the car near the intersection of Pacific Coast Highway and Second Street.

County energy cuts asked

The county's newly-formed Energy Commission Friday voted 11-3 to urge supervisors to impose on the 1 million residents of unincorporated territory similar energy controls to those imposed recently by the City of Los Angeles.

The commission also urged supervisors to seek state legislation which would enable the board to enforce such controls, in light of the fact the board now does not have that power.

The commission action also called for the county to seek the cooperation of the Southern California Association of Governments (SCAG) and independent cities in the county to "provide leadership by showing the county was prepared to take action in controlling energy waste."

The commission action occurred during a four-hour session which centered mainly on the fact that the county cannot sumarily impose penalties and restrictions on its residents since—unlike the City of Los Angeles—it does not control a utility that supplies power.

Some members pointed out that the City of Los Angeles can enforce controls because the Department of Water and Power, an arm of the city, provides residents with power. In unincorporated territory residents are supplied by the Southern California Edison Company, which is not facing the same crisis as the city department, and which is under the jurisdiction of the state Public Utilities Commission.

Even while commission members were urging mandatory controls in county areas, Supervisor Kenneth Hahn was urging the City of Los Angeles to exempt from its stringent measures three county hospitals served by the Department of Water and Power (DWP).

Hahn pointed out that the County-USC Medical Center, the John Wesley Hospital and Olive View Mid-Valley Hospital are classified as commercial users under the city's conservation ordinance, which requires that they achieve a 20 per cent energy cutback now and a 33 per cent cutback by the middle of January.

"This would make some surgeries totally impossible," Hahn said. And because of this, he urged the city to reclassify the hospitals as industrial users, which would allow them to reduce energy by 10 per cent initially and only 16 per cent by mid-January.

Hahn said county health officials have told him they could maintain critical services at the hospitals if they are allowed the lesser reductions.

In another energy issue, the commission postponed until Friday its planned review of the granting of variances to Burbank, Glendale and Pasadena which would allow the three cities to burn high-sulfur fuel as a means of averting rolling blackouts.

Glendale earlier this week was granted a 60 day variance by the Air Pollution Control Hearing Board to burn high-sulfur fuel because that city faced an imminent crisis with stocks of low-sulfur fuel nearing the depletion level early in January.

Commissioners decided they would ask hearing board officials to appear at next Friday's meeting to discuss the impact on pollution levels caused by the burning of high-sulfur fuel.

At Friday's meeting, Dr. John Foster, Jr., vice president of TRW, Inc., was elected chairman of the energy commission.

Foster, vice president of the Redondo Beach-based aerospace facility, only recently returned to Southern California after an eight-year stint with the Defense Department.

Dr. Theodore Erb, professor of political science at California State University, Long Beach, was named vice chairman.

Secretary is Dr. Calvin H. Bowers, dean of ethnic and urban studies at Pepperdine University.

Marshall Industries sues IBM

United Press International

Marshall Industries of San Marino has filed a $36 million civil law suit against International Business Machines Corp. for alleged antitrust violations.

The complaint, filed in U.S. district court, alleges that Marshall, a distributor of electronic supplies and components, was forced to abandon its computer disk product business because of IBM's practices.

The monopolistic practices alleged in Marshall's complaint are similar to those which were found to be in violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act by a trial court which ordered IBM to pay $259 million in damages to the Telex Corp. of Tulsa, Okla.

In response to the Marshall complaint, IBM said in a statement, "From what we've seen in initial press reports, the Marshall suit, like others recently filed against IBM, appears to be based on the judge's ruling in the Telex case."

Binoculars stolen

Binoculars, a cassette tape player and other items, valued at $117, were taken from Daniel R. Williams' car while it was parked in the 1600 block of West Water Street, Long Beach, police reported Friday.

Probation check delays hearing

Preliminary hearing for a 22-year-old Huntington Beach woman charged with marijuana possession Friday was delayed in Long Beach Municipal Court for 30 days pending determination of her eligibility for probation as a first-time offender.

Kathryn Lynn Keithley, who listed a Huntington Beach motel as her residence, was arrested Dec. 17 after a blazing gun battle in which her 30-year-old male companion was killed by police.

Miss Keithley was charged with possession of five small bags of marijuana found in the bullet-riddled car in which Ronald L. Virgin was fatally wounded after trading shots with robbery detectives.

Police said the woman, who was unharmed in the exchange, did not participate in the gun battle.

Miss Keithley could qualify for probation if investigators determine she has never been convicted of a drug-related offense. Her probation report will be reviewed in Dept. 2 of Long Beach Municipal Court Jan. 28. The defendant remained in sheriff's custody in lieu of $1,500 bail.

Virgin was wanted for questioning about a murder attempt in Huntington Beach and was a robbery fugitive from Oklahoma and Texas. Police said Virgin also was a suspect in five Long Beach robberies in the past two months.

POSITIVE THINKING

by Norman Vincent Peale

How to find more in '74

I'm told that when Jews assemble for their New Year's celebration, they often recite a prayer which begins, "Today is the birthday of the world." And a New Year's message from a Jewish educator says, "Whatever was our yesterday, today — as every day — we start anew."

What a dynamic idea! New life to start a new year! For new life is the central theme of all religious thinking, Jewish and Christian alike. The ability to put the past in the past, then to look forward to the future is one of the greatest qualities we possess. A new start, a new beginning, a new life: what a motivation for 1974.

YEARS AGO, as a student at Boston University, I was sitting at my desk one day with a book in front of me. I was supposed to be studying some assignment, but couldn't keep my mind on it. Instead I was reading the advertising on my desk blotter. It was one of those that local bookstores used to hand out free to the students. On it was a calendar, descriptions of various merchandise the shop carried and a few quotations from great thinkers.

My wandering eye fell upon one of these. It was from a man who was once prime minister of Great Britain, William Ewart Gladstone. And this is what it said: "It is a dangerous thing for any young man to start life without the thought of God."

I can still see that blotter in my mind's eye, and remember that quotation today. I've never forgotten it. And I think it can be aptly applied to the new year. For it is a dangerous thing for any person to start out a new year without the thought of God. And why? Well because all life is uncertain. None of us can see very far ahead of life's pathway. We are surrounded on every hand by insecurity. The only certain and for sure factor in this world is the Eternal, "the same yesterday, today and forever." He is our security.

So it's well to keep God in mind as Gladstone suggested. When I was a young boy at home, my father would bring a Bible to the dinner table on every New Year's Eve. Solemnly, he would open it, turning to its very beginning to read the first four words of the first chapter of Genesis. "In the beginning God." That was all — just those four words. He never explained, just let those luminous words hang in the air. But that they are still remembered shows that they registered.

Anyway, it's very true that anyone who will make those four words basic philosophy will have what it takes to meet whatever problems come during the year. Indeliberately with such a great all-conquering idea, you can be victorious over any difficulty 1974 hands you. This is so because such reliance on God and His power activates a new start and with it the belief that you can forget yesterday and go forward confidently into the future.

INDEED THE Bible is filled with this emphasis on new starts and fresh beginnings. Such words as: "Forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark . . ." And again, "Old things are passed away; all things are become new." And still again, "Behold, I make all things new."

One thing always to remember is that the past is called the past simply because it is past. Don't lug the past into the future. So what? You have made mistakes, done dumb things. Who hasn't? Extract from them what know-how and experience they contain and then consign the past to the past. Turn and face the future to those wonderful new starts and great new beginnings.

This, then, is YOUR formula for new life in the new year. Remember that New Year's Day is, indeed, "the birthday of the world." That New Year's Day is the first day of the rest of your life. And don't forget "In the beginning God."

Nazareth mayor an Arab Christian

Tourists in the Holy Land for the Christmas season who visited Nazareth were often surprised to learn that the mayor of that Israeli city is an Arab, Seif-Eddeen Zu'bi. He is also a member of the Israeli Parliament. A Christian, he led observances of Christmas in the ancient Galilean city.

WILLIAM BALL

New minister at Church of Christ

William Ball Jr., a native of Downey, has been named the new minister at Long Beach's Central Church of Christ, 501 Atlantic Ave. He is 25.

Mr. Ball comes here from Kona, Hawaii, where he has been minister of the Church of Christ for the past two years. Prior to that he worked with churches of Christ in Yorba Linda and Downey.

Married and the father of two children, Mr. Ball attended Long Beach State University. While in Hawaii he wrote and broadcast a radio program "Let God Be True."

At Central Church, Ball succeeds Troy M. Cummings, who is now teaching at the School of Evangelism in Buena Park. The Long Beach church is under the oversight of elders James C. Gordon and Bud L. Worsham.

Help sought for Chile refugees

A "strong effort" will be made by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to encourage governments to accept 1,700 non-Chilean refugees facing a departure deadline set by the ruling military junta in Chile.

Lutheran Bishop Helmut Frenz of Santiago, chairman of the ecumenical National Refugee Committee in Chile, said possibilities for openings seem most likely in Western Europe.

1973's top stories

Conservative trend noted in religion

By LES RODNEY

If a pattern could be detected in the world of religion in 1973, it was a trend toward the conservative and the traditional.

Voted the number one religion story in the United States by religion editors in their annual poll was the smashing victory of Rev. Dr. J. A. O. Preus and his conservative backers at the convention of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod. Preus was reelected president of the rift-torn denomination, and his insistence on a literal view of the Bible was made binding policy, an outcome which seemed to doom the tenure of Dr. John Tietjen and most of the faculty at the Synod's prestigious Concordia Seminary in St. Louis.

THE CONSERVATIVE trend could also be noted in the second choice of the 64 voting members of the Religion Writers Assn.—a move from "social activism" toward personalized religion.

Writers cited growth of Bible study and prayer groups, charismatic groups stressing spiritual gifts, and emphasis on local grass roots church life and issues over nationally oriented programs. Some writers, while agreeing with the strength of this trend, saw no necessary contradiction between enriched inner life and worldly social concerns by Christians.

Voted story number three was still another conservative victory, refusal of the Episcopal Church to ratify ordination of women, despite rising ferment for such a change.

Noticeable upsurge in the charismatic or Pentecostal-type movement within both Protestant and Catholic ranks emerged as the number four story. The movement stresses the immediate power of the Holy Spirit, faith healing and, in a secondary light, the controversial speaking in unknown tongues. It surfaced this year in the Southern Bible Belt. Three Georgia Baptist ministers were asked to resign from their churches because they supported the movement. Deacons of a Baptist church in Atlanta stripped a prominent layman of every office he held because he was leading a small group in speaking in tongues, in "exorcising demons," and teaching that Christ speaks to "genuine" Christians in an audible voice. A number of Trappist monks in a Georgia monastery have embraced the movement.

Key 73, a year-long evangelistic crusade, won fifth place, though several of the editors said that in their area it was a "non-story." In at least one city, Worcester, Mass., debate over Key's activities resulted in a split between the "evangelical" and "liberal" participants. Nationally, some Jewish leaders who criticized Key for its slogan of calling the continent to Christ, and for proselytizing among Jews, later said it actually had positive effects in stimulating dialogue that clarified the relationships of Christianity and Judaism. (In this area, Key 73, while not high profile, was marked by successful cooperative work of various denominations in neighborhood surveys and scripture distribution.)

OTHER STORIES in the top ten:

Sixth — A movement among parents to "rescue" their offspring from such zealous religious communities as the Children of God, a story that included the trial of Californian Ted Patrick for helping parents to "abduct" their sons and daughters from the sect.

Seventh — The Vatican's reaffirmation of the infallibility of the Pope in teaching "ex cathedra" on doctrine and morals. There is nothing new here, but there has been some wishful thinking among Protestant advocates of reunion that the huge stumbling block represented by papal infallibility might go away.

Eighth — The continuing violence between Protestants and Catholics in Ireland, though some of the religion editors saw it as basically an economic, sociological and class conflict rather than religious. Ninth — The stand taken by the U.S. Catholic bishops for the grape-let-tuce boycott, in support of Cesar Chavez.

Tenth — Decision of the United Presbyterian Church to re-enter the Consultation on Church Union it left last year, signifying to some that Protestant ecumenism is not dead.

AMONG OTHER events which drew votes was the schism in the Presbyterian Church U.S. (the southern church), in which some 100,000 members formed a new conservative group.

Also the Episcopal Church's relaxing of rules allowing second marriages, and Rev. Dr. Carl McIntire's fight with the Federal Communications Commission over closing down of his radio station.

Several writers mentioned Watergate as indicating a need for religious morality in the country.

In Tulsa, which editor Beth Macklin of the Daily World calls "the buckle on the Bible Belt," she reports that Children of God are warning the population that the comet Kohoutek means the world is about to come to an end.

And to one and all, a Happy New Year.

Not White House man — Graham

Billy Graham has been accused of being a "tool" of the White House and lending to its activities an aura of piety by his friendly association with President Nixon. But this week, the evangelist hit back at that charge in a story that made some headlines.

It's the same sort of accusation, he says, that critics leveled at Jesus — "that he spent time with publicans and sinners."

Put in a more modern context, Graham adds, it's a form of "McCarthyism" — guilt by association. "He has repeatedly emphasized that his ministry to presidents, past and present, does not imply approval of what they do.

Challenging claims that his presence suggested a sort of benediction to White House conduct, he said: "It is quite obvious that I do not agree with everything the Nixon administration does." But, he added, "When a friend is down, you don't go and kick him — you try to help him up."

Astronaut tells how moon trip made him a better Christian

By LES RODNEY

"As we flew into space we had a new sense of ourselves, of the earth, and of the nearness of God. We were outside of ordinary reality. I sensed the beginning of some sort of deep change taking place inside of me."

So writes Apollo 15 astronaut Jim Irwin in his new book "To Rule the Night," a fascinating, candid account of the grueling exploratory trip to the surface of the moon. The title is taken from "And God made the two great lights, the greater light to rule the day, and the lesser light to rule the night."

Aerospace editor Herb Shannon and I spoke with Irwin last week in connection with his visit to the Lighthouse Book Store. You may have read Herb's story. We won't move into his beat here, this is a follow-up on the religious side of Jim Irwin, about which we chatted.

LIKE MOST of America's astronauts, Irwin is a religious man who felt his faith strengthened by his voyage into the stunning beauty of the universe, where, he notes: "You see little space-age earth for what it is, and you experience the orderliness of the universe. I know this has been said before, but from our vantage point it took on new force—how could all this be the accidental result of a juxtaposition of atoms, without plan? It couldn't."

There is no "science vs. religion" debate for him. "To me," he says, "science is the uncovering of God's basic laws. Were there any agnostics or atheists among the astronauts, we asked, and what was the impact of space flight upon them? "There were a few, not many," replied the trim 43-year-old Irwin. "I don't know what they think now, that's one of the things I'm curious about and want to find out."

He has been busy. He organized and ran a High Flight program in Colorado, offering a spiritual retreat for veterans of Vietnam. He has made many public appearances for NASA, at churches and universities, and representing the U.S. as a good will ambassador abroad.

Too busy, in fact, he now says. In '72 he suffered a heart attack which grounded him temporarily, and though he appears fully recovered and feels great, he has taken it as a signal to remind him that while astronauts are indeed special people whose eyes have seen the glory, they are still but people, with all of peoples' frailties and failings.

"I HAD REACHED a proud point," he says, "and this brought humility back to me. I couldn't image that I, Jim Irwin, would have a heart attack. This was a hard thing to accept when it first happened. As Mary, my wife, said, it was God taking charge again.

"This heart attack made me more dependant on the Lord. It made me accept my own human weakness. I wonder if accepting weakness is not the first step toward new spiritual power."

Irwin tells of accepting Christ at 11, but of going through many ups and downs as a Christian. After the moon trip, he decided to be baptized again, in a Southern Baptist church, as "rededication to Jesus Christ."

Coming back, he recalls, there was a shock in becoming "an instant celebrity, a hero, a sort of superman," and meeting with heads of states and other famous people in highly charged moments.

"Not the best atmosphere for sorting out your experience and finding what it meant," he says. "It took a while to discover that had happened to me."

That discovery is in the book, he feels. Like any author, he hopes his book does well, but as an evangelist with something special to say, he doubly hopes so.

Why was he picked to go to the moon, he asked himself—a man who almost quit the Air Force Flight School, who survived a terrible accident while training another pilot, who was grounded for several violations, was turned down twice by NASA and was at the maximum permitted age when finally accepted.

He is convinced he knows the answer.

"I didn't realize it till later. The Lord wanted me to go to the moon so I could come back and do something more important with my life than flying airplanes."

JIM IRWIN speaks articulately but simply. Though he is intense about his new mission, he has a ready smile and the sense of high spirits that makes the balanced man.

He tells of a moment on the moon when he and Dave Scott, exploring on the Rover vehicle, were overwhelmed by the beauty of the moon's towering sunlit mountains. "Dave," he said, "that reminds me of a favorite biblical passage in the Psalms: 'I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help.' But of course we get quite a bit from Houston too." The failure of Irwin's first marriage, problems in his second marriage and how that relationship has finally deepened, are woven into this highly personal account of himself, along with answers to the questions he knows people have—how did it actually feel when you blasted off, how did you guys manage in such cramped quarters, weightless, with bodily functions and all, etc.

BACK ON earth now, we asked, does he look at that old moon in the sky in a different way than he used to?

"I sure do," was the reply. "I even point out the spot where I walked." He smiled. "My favorite resort, where I spent the summer of '71."

Not only that, he adds, he also looks at the earth differently now. "When I travel, I often have in my mind's eye the vision of the earth as being the size of a basketball, that's how big it looked when we first looked back." Looking back at mother earth, he says, "I wanted to tell man how lucky he was, how unique, and that he must learn to live with his neighbor."

These days, Jim Irwin is spending more time with his family than in the hectic time after splash-down. But he still finds time to speak his religious convictions, hopefully "affecting lives for Him."

"I feel a compulsion," he says, "to hit as hard as I can while I can be useful, before my fame fades."

"My advice is to stock up. The latest rumor from Rome is that there's going to be a shortage of Holy Water."

Nat'l. Council Asks fair energy solutions

Gasoline rationing, support for mass transit, and a wide-ranging search for new sources of energy are among recommendations to meet the current energy crisis adopted by a high-level policy group representing member churches in the National Council of Churches.

In a resolution dealing for the first time with a problem now gripping the entire world, the Council's 40-member executive committee also made clear that churches have specific roles to play in the crisis, provided government and energy industries set policies that are fair and equitable to begin with.

A major task ahead for the churches is to help people come to grips with necessary changes in "present lifestyles," the resolution said.

Churches must minister to the "trauma of many people in the situation. The churches must never forget or withhold their unique pastoral function."

In their statement, adopted in a one-day meeting, the church leaders cautioned that the American people need to know whether and, if so, why:

— Energy companies are now receiving their highest profits in history.

— The development of clean, safe energy sources such as solar energy have been neglected by both government and industry.

— At a time when consumers are being asked to sacrifice, energy companies are not."

Great Salt Lake turns into industrial bonanza

By DAVID BRISCOE

SALT LAKE CITY (U) — Its shoreline once bustling with resorts.

Turn-of-the-century bands once played for thousands as the setting sun sent streaks of gold across its silver water.

Now, only the sunsets are the same.

The Great Salt Lake, dregs of a giant prehistoric body of water which once covered much of the West, is a disappointment for many tourists, salt in the eyes of the state which governs it and something of a mystery to scientists trying to predict its future.

But it has turned into an industrial gold mine. And for that reason this briny inland sea has become the center of ecological controversy, corporate battles, lawsuits and politics.

QUESTIONS of administering the lake have gone as high as the U.S. Supreme Court, which has decided it is a navigable body of water and, therefore, owned by Utah rather than the federal government. As a result, the state stands to gain millions of dollars annually in royalty and tax revenue from industrial development.

But the problem of planning has been passed from one legislative session to another, and there still is no clear-cut state policy on developing the lake and its environs.

Just west of Salt Lake City and Ogden, the Great Salt Lake is more than 75 miles long, 50 miles wide and the largest lake in the United States outside the Great Lakes.

Its waters have been rising since 1963, inundating old resort sites, cutting the access road to an island state park and threatening its oldest industry, salt farming. The lake was nearly 60 per cent larger in 1872 than in 1963 but has since risen to a 40-year high.

SCIENTISTS disagree on the cause of the rise and whether it will continue. Runoff, irrigation, evaporation rates and general weather conditions are among factors mentioned.

Of greater concern than the rising waters, however, are man-caused changes in the lake.

When Morton Salt Co. started rolling trains of spoke-wheeled wooden carts onto the lake's south shore in the late 1890s, Great Salt Lake's industrial potential was obvious. It would be salt for America's tables.

Today, more salt goes on the country's roads, and the salt companies are dwarfed by ambitious new industries dissolving the salty sea into magnesium baseball bats and fertilizer for worldwide export.

Its potential for industrial exploitation is estimated in the tens of billions of dollars. Scientists estimate its water contains eight billion tons of salt and other minerals, in addition to the potential for oil under the lake bed.

EVEN the lake's only marine life, the tiny brine shrimp, is being canned in a kind of suspended animation for sale as tropical fish food. Shrimp eggs are vacuum packed and, after as long as nine years, hatch into live food, says their prime producer, Glen Sanders of Sanders Brine Shrimp Co.

The lake's largest industry is a magnesium and chlorine plant operated by NL Industries on the barren west shore, north of Grantsville. Company officials say they have an $80 million investment in the plant which has begun producing 40-pound ingots of one of the world's lightest metals and liquid chlorine directly from lake water.

Great Salt Lake Minerals and Chemicals, a $40-million industry on the northern end of the lake, pipes highly concentrated brine from the lake's north arm 21 miles to extract potassium sulphate for fertilizer.

The firm also claims to be the state's No. 1 producer of salt, a byproduct of its operation.

Several other mineral leases have been granted along the 1,500-square-mile lake's shore.

And the Amoco Productions Co. is exploring 606,000 acres of lake bed, which it is leasing at $1 per acre a year, for what could be the lake's richest booty — offshore oil.

ONCE, booty meant tourists.

A giant dancing pavilion at Saltair. A roller coaster. Fresh-water swimming pool. Boardwalks and beach houses.

Now the dead sea hosts only a scattering of sailboats, a hair-line of rocky beach, an A-frame souvenir shop and some dressing shacks.

Saltair resort, with its midway and mosque-like pavilion, was abandoned in the 1960s, crumbled in the salty wind and finally burned by vandals.

The only operating recreational facility on the lake is Silver Sand Beach and its adjoining boat harbor.

John Silver, co-owner, says the resort grossed about $280,000 last year with 75 per cent of its visitors from out of state.

They waded into the lake's murky water, fighting off brine, flies and algae that collect in gobs. Smoke from a Kennecott Copper Co. smelter clouds the background.

"Yes, the tourists are disappointed," Silver says. "But development of the lake's recreational potential is not going to be done on a shoestring like we're trying to do."

Silver says it has cost him $300,000 to build up the beach because of the rising water.

THE lake's recreational development was brought to a near standstill this year when water began splashing over a newly-constructed causeway to Great Salt Lake State Park on Antelope Island.

Antelope is the largest of 10 islands in the lake. From a distance it appears a barren mountain, but it was used by pioneers as a natural cattle range and has grazed buffalo.

The 28,000-acre island is largely owned by Antelope Island Cattle Co. of Denver, but the state has purchased 2,000 acres at the northern tip for the state park.

The lake retains drawing power.

Silver estimates 450,000 people visited the beach last year.

Hourly boat rides and nighttime dinner cruises are often filled.

And Silver says more than 80 boats are docked on the lake with plans for additional harbor facilities.

Once a dumping ground for Salt Lake City's raw sewage, the lake has long been the subject of mismanagement charges from environmentalists.

OIL spills from refineries along the lake's eastern shore already have threatened the fragile state bird refuge in marshlands to the north.

Once uniformly from six to eight times saltier than the ocean, the lake now is a patchwork of varying salinity and color.

Willard Bay in the northeast has become a closed-off freshwater lake, fed by the Bear River. Across Promontory Point to the west, the north arm of the lake is a giant rose colored pond, nearly saturated with salt and other minerals.

The main body of water in the south varies in salt content at different levels and has turned more and more dilute.

Scientists blame the varying salinity on man-made dikes and roadways that cross the lake. The largest and most controversial is a 15-mile stretch of arrow-straight railroad track that splits north from south.

Built by Southern Pacific in the late 1950s to replace a wooden trestle, the stretch was considered an engineering marvel. Now it is a headache for the state and the subject of lawsuits by industries in the south which say it threatens their livelihood.

Great Salt Lake is salty because it has no major outlets except through evaporation. The salts and minerals from three river basins have washed into the lake over thousands of years, feeding it like a giant bathtub. The causeway divided the lake, with fresh water flowing only into the southern end. The north became a giant evaporation pond, fed only by salt water flowing out of the southern end through two 15-foot culverts in the causeway.

The southern end freshened.

Another U.S. trade surplus

WASHINGTON (U) —

The United States registered its third consecutive monthly trade surplus in November, although the surplus was sharply reduced by higher costs of imported petroleum and other fuels, government trade figures have revealed.

The November surplus of exports over imports totaled $85.7 million, which put the over-all surplus for the first 11 months of the year at $765.9 million.

UNLESS there is a sharp setback in trade in December, the United States should finish 1973 with its first trade surplus in three years.

The November trade

figures were the first to show the impact of the higher cost of importing petroleum and petroleum products from other countries, and these costs reduced what would have been a much larger monthly surplus.

Figures compiled by the Commerce Department shows that imports of fuels, lubricants and related materials were valued at $977.7 million, an increase of $187 million over the October figure. The amount appeared to be a record high.

United States trade with other countries has been sharply improved in recent months following deficits of $2 billion in 1971 and $6 billion in 1972.

The improvement was attributed mainly to two devaluations of the dollar which have made U.S. goods cheaper overseas.

Exports during November totaled $5,819 million, while imports totaled $6,733.3 million, both new records. The figures were adjusted for seasonal variations.

The increase in exports over October was 6 per cent, while the increase in imports was 14 per cent.

The November trade surplus of $85.7 million compared with a surplus of $527 million in October and $873 million in September.

THE SURPLUS for the first 11 months of $765.9 million compares with a deficit of just over $5.9 billion for the same period a year ago, showing an over-all turnaround in trade of about $6.7 billion.

Exports so far this year have been at an annual rate of $63.7 billion, a whopping 42 per cent above last year's total exports of $49.2 billion.

Imports have been at an annual rate of $68.8 billion, about 24 per cent above the 1972 total of $55.6 billion.

Among export items which made big gains during November were crude materials, except for fuels, and transportation equipment. Exports of food and live animals also increased during the month totaling $1.2 billion.

Gas-to-oil switch expensive

By DON RUTHERFORD
Ridder News Service

WICHITA, Kan. — The reduction of gasoline production in the nation's refineries is going to be easier said than done. There's more to switching from gasoline to heating oil, for example, than the mere flipping of a switch.

Most of the country's multimillion dollar refineries were designed and built to manufacture gasoline. Any significant deviation from the original design would require multimillion-dollar modifications, according to Bob Johnston, manager of Derby Refining Co.'s plant here.

THIS MAY partially explain the Nixon administration's proposal to cut gasoline production at the refineries by 5 per cent, rather than at a higher rate.

Johnston said refineries have been instructed to reduce their processing of crude oil, and this will mean an across-the-board cut in all types of petroleum products.

Right now the average U.S. refinery yields 46 barrels of gasoline for every 100 barrels of crude oil taken in. It yields 24 barrels of heating oil and kerosene, seven barrels of jet fuel, seven barrels of lubricating oil and 14 barrels of other products, such as asphalt.

This means that for every 42 gallons (one barrel) of crude oil that goes into a refinery, 19.32 gallons of gasoline, 10.08 gallons of heating oil and kerosene, 2.94 gallons of jet fuel, 2.94 gallons of lube oils and 5.88 gallons of other products are made.

Johnston explained that crude oil enters the refinery and is processed in a fractionating tower — or "bubble tower," as it is sometimes called.

THIS fractionating tower is designed and built to make products in the percentages prescribed. It is not possible to make significantly less gasoline and more heating oil, for example, without substantially changing the composition of the heating oil and making it less saleable on today's markets.

One of the clearest examples of the difficulty in refinery change-overs is at Mobil Oil Co.'s Augusta, Kan., plant, according to Mobil spokesman Bud McMullen.

The Mobil plant makes asphalt out of its heavy residual oils after they have passed through the fractionating tower. All the heating, cooling, pressurizing and "cracking" in the world isn't going to make the heavy oil light enough to be used as gasoline.

Johnston estimates that about 5 per cent of the Derby plant's gasoline production can be switched to heavier oils. The plant refines 30,000 barrels of raw product per day, and makes 72 per cent of it into gasoline — or 21,600 barrels per day.

THE DERBY refinery's chief chemist, Rod Kingston, said that in addition, more heating oil could be made from gasoline if certain specifications for the various fuels, such as propane, were changed.

Obviously, with a 15-per-cent reduction in crude oil use and a transfer of three per cent of the capacity to products other than gasoline, Derby's gasoline production could be cut from 21,600 barrels per day to slightly under 17,000.

To go beyond that, Johnston said, would require expensive modifications — and with the current price structure for non-gasoline petroleum products being what it is — the return on investment simply wouldn't be there.

PEOPLE IN THE NEWS

A founding director of new Los Angeles National Bank is Fernando Oaxaca of Long Beach, vice president of Ultrastreams, Inc. Located across from the Broadway Plaza at 715 So. Flower St., the board is composed of many elements of the Los Angeles community including majority representation from the Spanish speaking and black communities minority population.

Ronald Brack has been named assistant vice president and manager of Glendale Federal Savings and Loan Association's Long Beach branch, 5535 Stearns St. President Douglas A. Clarke has announced.

Books about the lake say there has never been a reported drowning.

Hey, you can really float in this stuff," a young man yells across the water, his head and toes bobbing out of the brine.

A companion dives into the water head first and comes up rubbing his eyes. That only makes the pain worse. Diving is not recommended.

"We come out here about once every two years just to remember what it's like," one Salt Lake City visitor says.

There is some talk of massive private development on the lake but so far the only buildings are Silver's.

The souvenir shop at Silver Sands stocks trinket memories of the past and gives fleeting rebirth to myths surrounding the dead sea. Guides relate stories of giant whirlpools with outlets to the ocean, schools of whales and lake monsters.

None of this is taken seriously, but scientists, explorers, industrialists, bathers and public officials have had a stake in increased curiosity about the lake ever since James Clyman and three other fur trappers circled its shoreline in 1826 and declared it was not the Pacific Ocean.

'American way of life' ending; who's to blame?

By RICHARD L. STERN
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (U) — With the advent of the energy crisis, we the consumer, find ourselves blamed for perpetuating what business and government have been telling us is the American way of life.

William E. Simon, the new energy chief, pointing at the consumer, recently said, "It is obvious we have been a nation of great energy wastrels."

But with a lack of government planning in the past and with business pushing us to use its products, are we truly wastrels? Or, perhaps, are we the victims?

WE have bought bigger and faster gasoline guzzlers as Madison Avenue painted television pictures for us to want to. Summer nights with beautiful men and women snuggled in their vinyl-upholstered, air-conditioned, power-braked cars.

Harried housewives have watched as carefully coiffed actresses, playing their counterparts in television commercials, supposedly doubled leisure time with bigger washers and driers, garbage disposals, electric mixers, knives and can openers, and made their lives easier with petroleum derived plastic bags, detergents and waxes.

Indeed, for years, it was the Detroit automakers who steadfastly refused to give Americans small domestic cars until they realized their customers were buying imported cars.

IN Washington, until very recently, our political leaders were reluctant to allot to mass transit a share of the billions of dollars in highway funds realized through gasoline excise taxes.

Railroads were one direct victim of our mania for autos. But government disinterest abetted the decline of rails. Mail service, for instance, was increasingly diverted to the airlines.

Railroad executives, instead of fighting for the passenger market, gave in to the airlines, buses and cars. Railroad service and scheduling faltered, and in many cases was dropped.

Now we question whether this should have happened. New high-speed Amtrak service between Washington and New York was booked to capacity even before the energy crisis. The rails, it seems, still have allure.

LITTLE was revealed about the coming energy crisis that we are now told was foreseen by many experts.

The oil companies told us about friendly service and high octane gasoline that not only drove our auto monsters but helped keep their engines clean.

Corporate executives, and indeed the president of the United States, lived in a manner which epitomized the American dream — high speed jets, helicopters, limousines, and homes at the far reaches of the American continent.

How many commuters stuck in traffic jams on federally subsidized highways leading to Los Angeles, the epitome of a world the auto created, have dreamed of a smog free alternative, such as high speed, modern commuter lines?

And now, after trying to live the American dream, what are Stephen and Vilma Roumell of New Buffalo, Mich., who must commute about 50 miles a day in a rural area devoid of public transport, supposed to do with their gas guzzlers when the government calls on them not to buy more than 10 gallons of gas a week?

Are they really the culprits? Or, like the rest of us, are they merely the victims?

Christmas bonus list cut short

By ROZ LISTON
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Christmas bonuses were in short supply on Wall Street this year as many brokerage houses cut back on the traditional presents while others abandoned them altogether.

A UPI survey of several major houses found the stock market's disappointing performance in 1973 had taken a large bite out of Wall Street's Profits with little left over for employees at year's end.

"We didn't give any Christmas bonuses," said a spokesman for W.E. Hutton. "Since it appeared December would not bring us up to a profit for the year." The firm reversed in 1972 its longstanding policy of giving a share in profits to employees at Christmas.

Paine, Webber, Jackson &amp; Curtis Inc., another Wall Street giant, eliminated Christmas bonuses

this year. "It's the first time in a long while that we haven't paid bonuses but we lost $1.5 million in 1973," a spokesman said.

Goldman Sachs &amp; Co., which has paid Christmas bonuses as a percentage of its employee's annual income for more than 25 years, reduced the compensation to 10 per cent this Christmas. "For the past decade we have paid 16 per cent," a spokesman said.

Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner &amp; Smith Inc., the nation's biggest brokerage, revamped its salary and Christmas bonus policy in 1972.

"Last year we phased out the bonus and re-evaluated all salaries," said a spokesman. In addition, the house has re-evaluated pension and hospital benefits and all full-time employees participate in cash profit-sharing, he said.

A whale of a loophole

By DON G. CAMPBELL

Pass a law, that is, and you can bet that before the ink is dry on it somebody will have figured out a loophole.

For the past few years I have understood that an individual could arrange his investment program in a way that would make him a dealer (or whatever the nomenclature was) in stocks, thereby becoming self-employed and thus qualifying for Social Security. I have been trying to run this down for years but, alas, nobody seems to have any idea what I am talking about. My efforts to get some information on this program from Social Security have been equally unrewarding.

the strategy isn't widely known. In amending the Social Security law back in the 1950s to clarify, and broaden, the definition of "self-employed," Congress opened up a loophole and now seems to be stuck with it.

The original purpose for the change in the law was to make it possible for those persons not covered by Social Security (such as federal government employees) to get benefits, anyway, by moonlighting at a second job long enough to qualify.

Income from dividends, interest and rents doesn't make you a "moonlighter," of course, but, somewhere along the way, somebody discovered that income from a "limited partnership" — as long as the income from it amounts to at least $400 a year — does, indeed, qualify you for Social Security and Medicare once you have established the required number of quarters (a "quarter," not illogically, being four-to-the-year).

This has triggered a rash of new companies built around this approach and offering limited partnerships in a variety of ventures — the buying and leasing of oil properties being one example and real estate syndication being another.

Essentially, it's a one-time investment — of, say, $10,000 — on which you will receive a yield of at least $400 a year. Legally, this makes you a moonlighter rather than an investor and, after 2

It makes no difference whether you are already retired under some other non-Social Security plan, or whether — as a worker not covered by Social Security — you are anticipating future retirement.

How long before you qualify? Depends on your age. In the case of a worker born in 1908 and retiring in 1973, for instance, he would have to receive at least $400 a year under his limited partnership — and pay into Social Security — for 22 quarters (you have to round that out to 6 years) in order to qualify for the benefits. And $400 a year, of course, buys you only minimum Social Security coverage — currently, $84.50 a month for a single person, or $126.80 a month for a man and wife.

How does the Social Security Administration, itself, feel about this sort of gimmick? A spokesman put it this way: "Our position on these limited partnerships is that the granting of Social Security coverage based on strictly investment income is contrary to the philosophy of the program."

Be that as it may, it's a whale of a loophole for the one job holder in 10 not covered by Social Security.

(Mr. Campbell welcomes your letters and comments, but can answer only representative questions of general interest usable in this column.)

Women join FBI on TV, too

By BOB MARTIN
TV-Radio Editor

Don't say women aren't making progress.

For the first time in its nine-year history, "The FBI" television series is starting to feature female agents in key roles.

The first actress to be used in such a role is Betty Anne Rees, who portrays Special Agent Joyce Hanafin in Sunday night's episode, titled "Ransom" (7:30 to 8:30 on Channel 7).

Her debut in the series comes just about a year after the FBI actually began using special female agents.

Betty Anne doubles for guest star Anne Francis, as Ann Lemaire, in making a payoff drop to kidnapers.

Other guest stars in the "Ransom" episode are Jerry Houser, who starred in the "Summer of '42" and "Class of '44" movies, and former "Young Lawyers" star Zalman King.

Miss Rees is the first of three or four actresses due to portray special agents in "The FBI" series this season. The Ohio native, studied at the University of Miami, at the Pasadena Playhouse and with Uta Hagen in New York. She has appeared in numerous TV shows.

they'll have the opportunity of seeing 10 — count 'em, 10 — games on the tube.

Three college bowl contests and the East-West Shrine Game in San Francisco will be televised today. Two of them start at the same time, though — at 1 p.m. Tough.

On Sunday, semifinal action in the pro Super Bowl Tournament will be served up, with Dallas facing Minnesota at 10 a.m. on Channel 2 and Oakland taking on Miami at 1 p.m. on Channel 4.

Monday evening (starting at 5) will bring us the Sugar Bowl battle between unbeaten Alabama and undefeated Notre Dame on Channel 7.

And Tuesday, New Year's Day, will kick the year off right with the Cotton Bowl (Texas vs. Nebraska) at 11 a.m. on Channel 2; the Rose Bowl (USC vs. Ohio State) at 2 p.m. on Channel 4; and the Orange Bowl (Penn State vs. LSU) at 5 p.m. on Channel 4.

How did we ever get along without television?

RADIO NOTES: The news department of Long Beach station KGER (1330) for the past two years has incorporated a feature in its newscasts recognizing persons who have been of service to their fellow man. These stories for 1973 have been put into a half-hour program which will be broadcast at 3:05 p.m. today. Those cited on the "People Who Cared" program are from both public service agencies, such as fire and police departments, and from private life.

Long Beach station KLOK (88.1 FM) will broadcast a one-hour salute to the late Pablo Casals at 2 p.m. today and again at 11 a.m. Sunday. The program will feature recordings made by the famed cellist.

Paul (Panther) Pierce's news special on the new Baja California transpeninsular highway, "Baja — Follow the Brave New Road," will air at 5:45 p.m. today and Sunday on KMPC (710).

"Project: Sinatra," a 12-hour tribute to Frank Sinatra, will air on KFI (640) in six-hour segments from noon to 6 p.m. today and from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Sunday and after the Oakland-Miami pro football game.

"Superfan" (Ed Bieler), host of "Sportstalk" on KABC (790), will be one of the celebrities participating in a pregame benefit hockey contest against the Los Angeles Sharkettes girls hockey team in the Los Angeles Sports Arena Sunday night. The Sharks will play the Houston Aeros in a Muscular Dystrophy Association benefit game.

JACK LALANNE returns to KHJ-TV (Channel 9) with a live series, "Jack LaLanne's Fitness, Food and Fun," every weekday from 8:30 to 9 a.m., starting Jan. 14.

Starling replaces partridge in tree

ANNA, III. (AP) — The Carroll Loomis family may not have a partridge in a pear tree this Christmas — but they had a starling in their Christmas tree.

Two Loomis children spotted the injured starling outside their home a few days before Christmas. They took the bird inside and gave it a home in the Christmas tree. The bird hops down for food and then retires to its perch among the ornaments and tinsel.

Everett takes reins, Padres back in S.D.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The San Diego Padres were sold Friday to a group including controversial race-track owner Marjorie Everett and composer Burt Bacharach, who say they will keep the baseball team in San Diego.

The sale is subject to National League approval.

Financier C. Arnhold Smith, beset by lawsuits and government actions that have crippled his financial empire said he could no longer afford to operate the Padres.

Unless the league approves the sale promptly, he will lose several million dollars, Smith said in a telegram to National League President Charles (Club) Peeney.

The sale was made without league approval. Earlier this month, several National League owners expressed opposition to the Everett group.

A spokesman for baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn said that "nothing is official until the league sits down to vote on it."

The sale price wasn't announced but was believed to be less than the $12 million offered by Washington, D.C., supermarket magnate Joseph Danzansky. Smith paid $10 million for the new franchise in 1969.

"Because of various league involvements, I have been informed by Mr. Danzansky that he is unable to complete the contemplated purchase of the Padres," the 74-year-old Smith said. "I have therefore returned his check deposited with me in good faith and my agreement with Mr. Danzansky is of no further force or effect."

Smith said he expected the city to withdraw a $12-million lawsuit charging breach of the stadium lease and a $72-million suit alleging antitrust violations.

Club president E.J. (Buzze) Bavasi said he was "very hopeful the league will approve this group swiftly because time is getting short." He noted the Padres are still without a manager for 1974.

Mayor Pete Wilson said the city had thoroughly investigated Mrs. Everett, whose testimony to a federal grand jury in a Chicago race track scandal was believed to be the reason league club owners have not yet approved her group.

"We have not only found that they pass muster, but that they in fact promise an aggressive operation, one that has every promise of bringing a winning club to San Diego," Wilson said.

Mrs. Everett, leading stockholder in Hollywood Park race track, agreed to buy the Padres this fall, and reached agreement with the city on a new 15-year stadium lease.

But league club owners meeting in Houston Dec. 5 never voted on the Everett group. Instead they approved the sale to the Danzansky group, provided he could arrange to cover losses from the lawsuits filed by the City of San Diego.

Last Friday the league announced Danzansky had failed to meet the conditions, and ownership would revert to Smith.

Riley sparks Lakers

'Super Sub' scores 18 against Phoenix

By DOUG IVES
Staff Writer

Tireless Pat Riley, whose adrenalin is always flowing, provided the spark Friday night that lifted the Lakers to a 119-107 victory over the Phoenix Suns at the Forum.

Four nights ago the Suns humiliated the Lakers by 35 points in Phoenix and they started off quickly Friday, jumping away to a 12-4 lead.

Then something unique happened. Rather than let his team shake off their lethargy, assistant coach John Barnhill quickly inserted Riley for starter Jim Price, possible embarrassing his young guard by pulling him after only 3½ minutes.

But the move was a brilliant one, for the non-stop Riley immediately turned his teammates into a running, aggressive club and in only one minute's time the score was tied.

RILEY'S best performance came later, however. With the Lakers struggling, 80-78, with four minutes left in the third stanza, Barnhill again called on his "super sub."

The seven-year veteran added three points in the closing minutes of the period, then went on a 13-point scoring binge in the final 12 minutes, allowing the Lakers to breeze down the stretch.

Riley finished with 18 points, hitting 6 of his last 10 shots after a slow start. Connie Hawkins, slump-ridden the last five games with a shooting percentage of .278, bounced back against his former mates with a season high of 26 points, making 10 of 15 fielders.

Happy Hairston, steady as ever, provided 23 points and 14 rebounds while Gail Goodrich netted 21 points.

ELMORE Smith enjoyed his finest rebounding game, 19, in six weeks.

Charlie Scott was the best of the Suns, netting 29 points, and Neal Walk was the biggest disappointment, scoring only 13.

The Lakers take a two-game Pacific Division lead to Oakland tonight where they face the slumping Golden State Warriors, who have lost seven games in succession.

Coach Bill Sharman will miss the game and also Sunday's contest with Buffalo at the Forum due to his wife's illness.

Riley is convinced the Lakers can reverse an earlier 24-point loss in Oakland if they can sustain their hustle.

Fumbling 49ers muffle Assumption

48 turnovers in 84-61 win

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

EVANSVILLE, Ind. — Long Beach State radio broadcaster Jerry Jackson had saved a line for such a game.

"The teams have developed the Midas touch," said Jackson, "everything they touch turns to mufflers."

The teams combined for 48 fumble errors — 25 by Long Beach State — Friday night in the first round of the Evansville Tournament, but the 49ers routinely defeated Assumption College of Worcester, Mass., 84-61.

"You have to give Joe (O'Brien) and Assumption a lot of the credit," said LBSU coach Lute Olson. "The difference in the ability of the teams is much greater than the final score."

THE TRIUMPH: Long Beach's eighth in nine games in December, qualified the team for tonight's championship game against, you guessed it, the host University of Evansville, which has lost only once in 31 previous faceoffs against California teams.

Evansville's Keith Huff intercepted a pass with six seconds remaining, hesitated, then drove the length of the court to throw in a off-balance four-footer at the buzzer to give the Aces a 67-65 overtime victory over Kent State.

A crowd of 5,414 in Roberts Stadium saw Evansville collect its fifth win in seven outings and qualify for the finals of this tournament for the 13th time in 18 years.

TONIGHT'S title encounter will begin at 7 p.m. (PDT) and can be heard on KGBS-FM (97.1).

Long Beach played poorly Friday night, probably as poorly as it has all season, but there were extenuating circumstances the most notable of which was the benching of the Ponderosa brothers, Clifton and Roscoe.

"We have a team rule," said Olson, "that if you miss practice, you don't play."

The 49ers, who had Sunday and Monday off, practiced Christmas night and the Ponderosa, who live in Fresno, missed the workout.

Realistically, Olson couldn't have had a better opportunity to go without two-thirds of his front line.

"It was a lot better here, than in a league game later in the season," said Olson.

Both players, the 49ers' rookie coach indicated, would be back in the starting lineup tonight, if.

The "if" involves only Clifton, who, under any circumstances, would have played little Friday night. The 6-foot-8 freshman has been ill since the trip began, and could not hold any food Friday. He was examined by an Evansville physician after Friday night's game.

Bob Gross and Carlos Mina, who replaced the Ponderosa, played well, Gross hitting for 12 points and six rebounds and Mina getting eight scores and six caroms.

"I was happy with the way Bobby played," said Olson, "and Carlos did a good job for his first 12 minutes, then he got a little tired."

Even Gross is not 100 per cent. The transfer from Seattle University is suffering from a pulled muscle in his back.

"It felt good during the game," said Gross, who played a team-high 33 minutes, "but it's starting to bother me now."

The 49ers, behind Glenn McDonald, Leonard Gray,

Gross, Mina, and Rick Abernethy, jumped away to a 14-4 lead and extended that to 45-28 at halftime.

Abernethy, McDonald, Gray and Mina had eight points in the first 20 minutes, and Gross had seven.

Long Beach established several 20-point margins

Michigan title test for UCLA tonight

By GARY RAUSCH
Staff Writer

Wyoming came out firing Friday night, but it didn't take long before the Cowboys' guns held nothing but blanks.

UCLA polished off their opening-round opponent in the Bruin Classic, 86-58, before 12,582 at Pauley Pavilion and meets John Orr's Michigan Wolverines in tonight's 9 o'clock finale.

Campy Russell, a scintillating 6-8 sophomore, scored 26 points as the Big Ten's seventh-best team stunned USF, 83-66.

The Bruins saw their first zone defense of the season and tore it like leftover Christmas tissue paper.

Wyoming hoped to sag inside on Bill Walton with its 2-3 alignment. Walton got the ball and neatly deposited it in the hands of his teammates. The 6-11 redhead had seven assists while scoring 18 points and grabbing 17 rebounds. Keith Wilkes also totalled 18 points and Dave Meyers collected 14.

The Bruins' full-court zone press gave the Cowboys fits and helped build UCLA's 12-point lead inside the first six minutes. Wyoming gathered its forces for a brief run, slicing the margin to seven (20-13) with 11:06 to play.

Then the Bruins started playing volleyball above the basket, tipping in every missed shot. A 16-4 burst made it 36-17 with 5:19 remaining and Walton capped a mini-explosion in the final two minutes, taking a statue of liberty handoff from Greg Lee and starting a giant's layup at the head of the key.

It brought down the house and sent Orr out into the night to plot his strategy in hopes of ending the Bruins' 82-game winning streak.

Orr was like the pauper who got an invitation to the ball. He was just happy to be where he was, even if that was facing impending doom.

"This is what we've been waiting for, a chance to play UCLA," he said afterward. "Somebody is going to beat UCLA ... sometime."

Crew-cut and dressed conservatively, Orr had a faraway look in his eye, like maybe his Wolverines might be that "somebody."

He promised he wouldn't use any kind of deliberate or slowdown tactics against the Bruins. Though he watched only

Quarry vs. Foreman?

Promoter Don Fraser offered heavyweight champion George Foreman a $1 million guarantee Friday to fight No. 4 ranked Jerry Quarry at the Forum March 25.

The $1 million guarantee against 40 per cent of all revenue including closed circuit TV was eclipsed in size only by the $2.5 million guarantee by Forum boxing president Jack Kent Cooke to Muhammad Ali against Joe Frasier in 1971.

There was no immediate word from Foreman. Quarry would get 20 per cent of the gate and other rights. Foreman must sign to defend his title by Jan. 22 under a World Boxing Commission ruling.

Sharks sold by Bloom

The Sharks, struggling in last place in the WHA's western division, were sold Friday by majority owner Dr. Leonard Bloom to Los Angeles business executive Larry Daniels for an undisclosed amount.

The sale, announced by WHA president Dennis Murphy, has to be ratified by the league's board of trustees at its meeting in St. Paul, Minn., next week.

"I'm happy to be associated with the team and will have many future announcements," said Daniels, 37. He said details of the sale and changes in the organization would be given at a news conference next week.

LYNN SWANN... Outcatches Buckeyes

No one can stop our pass game: Swann

By LOEL SCHIRADER
Staff Writer

Ohio State used single coverage on Lynn Swann in the 1973 Rose Bowl game and the swift USC flanker caught six passes for 107 yards and one touchdown.

But the all-America from Foster City doesn't expect the same luxury when the Buckeyes and Trojans clash in the Rose Bowl on New Year's Day.

"I expect some double coverage," says Swann, whose 37 receptions for 667 yards and six touchdowns exceeds the output of the entire Ohio State receiving corps—29 catches for 474 yards and five touchdowns.

"Maybe they'll try to chop me down at the line of scrimmage or attempt some bump-and-run stuff," says Swann. "But that won't bother me. If they concentrate on me, that should leave Johnny McKay and Jim Ograbovich open."

"I don't care who catches the ball as long as we win. With Pat Haden throwing, I don't believe there is a team in college football that can stop our passing game."

Swann concedes that Ohio State's defense looks superior to that of a year ago, when the Trojans' Mike Rae completed 18 of 25 passes for 229 yards.

"They're more experienced," he says. "I don't believe we'll be able to do all the things we did last year. I'm sure Woody Hayes (Ohio State coach) is going to work very hard to try to stop our passing game."

Swann's career at USC has been bountiful. He has been chosen to virtually every all-America team and recently was selected the Trojans' most valuable player for the 1973 season.

"Everything has exceeded any expectations I had for my four years at USC," he says. "When I was being recruited out of high school, a lot of colleges said I could start for them as a sophomore."

"USC didn't tell me that. The coaches recruiting me said I had a chance to be a starter. When I came here, all I hoped for was to get playing time. I never looked upon myself as a future national star."

"Now I've had the thrill of winning the MVP award and being chosen for all-America teams."

Swann pauses. "I haven't had time to sit down and think about it. I'm certain when I do, I'll say, 'Wow, this has really been something.' It'll probably hit me after the Rose Bowl."

During his travels to receive all-America awards, Swann has had time to chat with players from teams the Trojans faced during the regular 1973 season.

"The Oklahoma guys, Rod Shoate and Lucious Selmon, felt we were the best team they had played against," he says. "They said our offense attacked them and they felt physically beaten when the game was over."

"I didn't tell them, but we felt the same way about their team."

All-Americans John Hicks, an offensive tackle, and Randy Gradishar, a linebacker, also are among Swann's acquaintances.

"Since they are from Ohio State, we talked about this year's Rose Bowl game," Swann reports. "They said they were coming out here to play a good game."

"But they didn't talk about beating us. When you get together for those all-America functions, you don't try to antagonize one another."

Swann laughs. "I told Hicks that if he gets to me when I'm returning a punt, I wished he wouldn't hit me too hard."

But Hicks, who is 6-3 and 252, didn't make any promises.

"He said if I don't go too fast, everything will be cool," says Swann. "I couldn't make any promises on that, either."

'Tis the season for football feasting Armchair QBs will get bowled over today

Associated Press
Two scrambling quarterbacks, Joe Barnes and Condredge Holloway, are expected to provide plenty of offensive spark tonight when Texas Tech and Tennessee collide in the Gator Bowl at Jacksonville, Fla.

For Texas Tech, a victory would just about clinch a spot in the postseason Top Ten. The Red Raiders, sparked by the passing and running of Barnes, go into the game with a 10-1 record and are ranked 11th nationally.

Holloway led Tennessee to what Vols coach Bill Battle called a "disappointing" 8-3 record, but a bowl victory would certainly take the edge off that disappointment.

In bowl action this afternoon, Houston (10-1) plays Tulane (9-2) in the Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl in Houston, and Auburn (6-5) meets Missouri (7-4) in the Sun Bowl in El Paso, Tex. There is also the East-West Shrine game in San Francisco. All will be nationally televised.

Both Battle and Texas Tech coach Jim Carlen said they expect a tight game, pointing to the similarities between the two squads to support that contention.

"Their quarterback, Barnes, does so many things that our man Holloway does," said Battle. "And the teams are alike in so many other ways."

"There are many similarities between our offenses and defenses," said Carlen. "Barnes and Holloway scramble the same way, but I'd say Holloway has the stronger arm."

Barnes, a senior, passed for 978 yards and ran for 568, while Holloway, a junior, accounted for 1,149 yards passing and 433 rushing.

Each club also has a top tailback: Senior Haskel Stanback of Tennessee gained 682 yards on 165 carries for a 4.1 average, while freshman Larry Isaac moved into Tech's starting lineup in midseason and finished with 10 touchdowns and an average of six yards per carry.

Houston, ranked 14th, will send the nation's seventh-leading rushing attack against No. 17 Tulane, which compiled a 9-2 record including a stunning upset of arch-rival Louisiana State. Fullback Leonard Parker ran for 1,123 yards this season to become Houston's seventh 1,000-yard rusher in eight years.

The Sun Bowl pits two unranked teams who represent two of the nation's toughest conferences, Auburn of the Southeastern and Missouri of the Big Eight. Each is coming off a late-season slump, Auburn having lost three of its last four games and Missouri four of its last five.

The East's muscle versus the West's finesse and fancy quarterback.

That's the matchup for the 49th annual Shrine classic when some of the nation's best college football players put on a show for the benefit of crippled children, pro scouts and an expected crowd of 35,000.

Though some scouts favor the East, oddsmakers have rated the squad a 6½-point underdog, largely because of the West's superior talent at quarterback. West coach Jim Sweeney of Washington State chose to start David Jaynes of Kansas, but in the wings are highly-rated Mike Boryla of Stanford and Arizona State's Danny White. "With all this talent, we're going to have a lot of fun," said Sweeney, a wizard at unorthodox offensive plays. "Some of the scouts are saying the East will embarrass us. We'll try to see that doesn't happen."

"We're going to play wide open. No sense playing close to the vest in an All-Star game," said East coach Paul Dietzel of South Carolina, who's 8-1 as an All-Star coach.

Represent Moore League

Gage, Bowers all-CIF choices

Millikan High defensive end Dave Gage and Compton linebacker Phillip Bowers are Moore League representatives on the 1973 all-CIF 4-A football team as selected by the Citizen Savings Athletic Foundation.

Gage, the All-City lineman of the year as selected by The Independent Press-Telegram, was one of four down linemen selected to the first team defense. Bowers is a second-team linebacker.

Both Millikan and Compton has stingy defenses this year — the Rams shutting out five teams and surrendering only 80 points in 10 games; the Tarbabes giving up 76 in 10 games.

Dennis Sproul, a 6-3, 195-pound quarterback who led Los Altos to the 4-A championship, was selected player of the year. Sproul was a second team 3-A selection a year ago when the Conquerors won a title on the lower level.

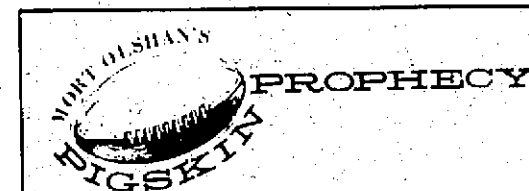

Champion Los Altos placed six players on the offensive and defensive units, runnerup Crespi of Encino had four.

Oakland, Miami confident

Combined News Services

The Oakland Raiders held a mini-work-out and final strategy session Friday before flying to Miami confident of victory against the Dolphins in Sunday's AFC championship game.

As they prepared to leave by chartered jet, several Raiders had some kind words for their Miami opponents but that's as far as the praise went.

Oakland is still confident of repeating its 12-7 victory over the Dolphins last Sept. 23 which snapped an 18-game Miami winning streak—even if they're playing on unpopular artificial turf before 80,000 unfriendly fans.

A SIGN taped to trainer George Anderson's door summed up the Raiders' sentiments: "Gravel, sand, dirt, mud, turf, grass, cement or asphalt, it doesn't matter. We can beat the Dolphins any place. Think positive."

As the Raiders put the finishing touches on their championship game plan, they singled out Miami running backs Mercury Morris and Larry Csonka and wide receiver Paul Warfield as three key people to keep their eyes on.

When the Raiders ended Miami's record streak one of the key reasons was their ability to stop Warfield.

But Warfield and quarterback Bob Griese don't think that will be the case Sunday.

"I don't think that first game will have much bearing on this one," Griese said.

Warfield said, "We know where we want to go — back to the Super Bowl — and Oakland just happens to be the team standing in our way. Revenge has nothing to do with it. I said a few things after the Cincinnati game and people made it out to be like I was looking for revenge against the Raiders. That's not true."

Overtime for Sugar ruled out

NEW ORLEANS (AP) —

The possibility of an overtime period to decide college football's national championship has been ruled out in the event of a tie between top-rated Alabama and third-ranked Notre Dame in the Sugar Bowl... even though both coaches are for it.

The suggestion of a fight to the finish Monday night was raised in light of the recent furor in the Big Ten when Ohio State and Michigan tied both on the field and in the standings, and the conference athletic directors picked Ohio State as their Rose Bowl representative.

"We contacted John Waldorf of the Big Eight Conference, chairman of the NCAA's Football Rules Committee," Robert C. James, commissioner of the Atlantic Coast Conference and chairman of the Extra Events Committee, said Friday.

"He said his committee had discussed it, but felt it would be most inappropriate to develop a system for an overtime in such a short period of time. My personal feeling is that it would be nice to have such a system."

Grant assumes scramblers will produce points

DALLAS (AP) — Minnesota coach Bud Grant says he doesn't "look for defenses to dominate the game" when his Vikings meet the Dallas Cowboys Sunday for the right to represent the National Football Conference in Super Bowl VIII.

There could be a "considerable amount of scoring," Grant said, primarily because of talent quarterbacks Fran Tarkenton of the Vikings and the Cowboys' Roger Staubach. Both are talented passers who can confuse linemen with their scrambling tactics.

The two perennial NFC powers have not met since 1971 when Dallas took a 20-12 NFC Divisional playoff victory. The Cowboys are favored by many oddsmakers to repeat Sunday-but by a narrower margin despite the absence of injured running back Calvin Hill.

THE VIKINGS have been practicing at Tulsa's Skelly Stadium to prepare for the meeting on Texas Stadium's artificial surface, and Grant was eager to get his team on the playing site today. The Vikings' home stadium has a grass surface.

"We won't have any trouble with the footing and should adjust to the surroundings easily," said Tarkenton, who has played in the stadium numerous times when he was with the New York Giants.

Drew Pearson, who signed during the off-season as a free agent with the Cowboys, will start at flanker and is expected to help bolster an offense weakened by the loss of Hill.

"Drew has established himself as a top receiver," said Dallas coach Tom Landry.

"Staubach feels he can hit him at any time, the way he felt about Otto Stowe before he got hurt," Pearson still is a little mystified about his starting roll as a rookie. "It's all still a little hard to believe but I never doubted my ability," the Tulsa graduate said.

The Vikings still are concerned over the health of linebacker Roy Winston, who sustained a back injury in last week's 27-20 playoff victory over Washington.

Winston missed part of Thursday's practice and Grant said he is "questionable for the game. His back gets stiff."

At the same time, Grant had nothing but praise for the Cowboys, saying middle linebacker Lee Roy Jordan "will be the best linebacker we've faced this year."

All 65,000 tickets have been sold for the clash as Dallas seeks to enter the Super Bowl for the third time.

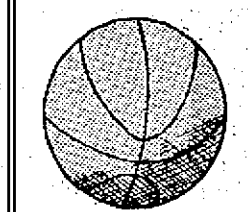

"We won't have any trouble with the footing and should adjust to the surroundings easily," said Tarkenton, who has played in the stadium numerous times when he was with the New York Giants.

Drew Pearson, who signed during the off-season as a free agent with the Cowboys, will start at flanker and is expected to MIAMI (AP) — Heisman Trophy winner John Cappelletti says no matter what anybody else says, he and his Penn State teammates will be national champions if they beat Louisiana State in the Orange Bowl.

"If we beat LSU, we'll consider ourselves national champions," declared Cappelletti. "Other people can say what they want. I think it was unfair for people to say the winner of the Sugar Bowl would get the MacArthur Bowl."

The unbeaten Nittany Lions enter the game ranked sixth, with Sugar Bowl foe Alabama and Notre Dame rated one-three. Oklahoma is ranked second.

"If we win, we will be 12-0," said Penn State coach Joe Paterno, a strong proponent for a playoff system to determine a national collegiate football champion.

"We will have a Heisman Trophy winner," Paterno added. "We will have had a great season. No matter what happens. We aren't going to let a bunch of writers sit down and take that away from our squad."

How good is Phil Esposito? Kings will find out tonight

By AL LARSON
Staff Writer

How good is Phil Esposito? The Kings' largest crowd this season, 15,000, will get some idea tonight when coach Bob Pulford's skaters engage Boston's Eastern Division leaders at 8:05 in the Forum.

Harry Sinden, managing director of the Bruins, says Esposito is the greatest center of all time. That covers a lot of ice.

With 35 goals, Esposito is scoring at a pace unmatched since the early days of the NHL. He's four goals ahead of the goal-a-game pace Maurice Richard had with Montreal in 1944-45 when he scored 50 goals in 50 games.

In 1970-71, when Esposito scored a record 76 goals, he didn't notch his 35th until the club's 38th game. The Bruins have played 31 this season.

PHIL ESPOSITO
On record pace

However, Esposito isn't the only Bruin on a tear. His 71 points give him a 17-point bulge over teammate Bobby Orr, the NHL's No. 2 scorer, while the third-leading scorer is Ken Hodge, Esposito's right wing, who has 50 points — four less than Orr.

Esposito has won the scoring championship in four of the last five years and may add another record this season if he keeps up his present pace — most minutes played by a center.

Sinden says, "We all know that Phil's thing is scoring goals, but he does so many things. Boston uses him to kill penalties, and he can be a dangerous man out there for you, even though you are the shorthanded team."

"He plays the man, and comes back to check. Hell, he does everything."

"The thing that a great many people don't realize is that Phil has improved tremendously since he came over in the Chicago trade. He wasn't as good five years ago as he is today."

"Take faceoffs. It's an important thing, but Phil wasn't the greatest in the world at that when he joined us. Now, I'd have to rank him with the top three or four guys in the league. "He's a helluva competitor, too. He hates losing with a passion. That's another sign of a great player."

"He does it all and it will be a long time before another center comes along as good as he is today. It may never happen."

As added fuel for some fires to keep one warm during the energy-crisis winter, fans continue to argue that Orr is the backbone of the Bruins, not Esposito.

Orr, who will turn 26 on March 20th, needs only two more goals to reach 200 during his eight-year pro career with the Bruins. His 198 goals in regular-season play are more than any other defenseman in NHL history.

No wonder the Kings are 6-2 — lifetime against Boston and 0-1 this season.

Frost workhorse for Viking five

By JIM MANGAN
Staff Writer

Dan Frost's workhorse performance for the Long Beach City College basketball team is reflected in statistics for 16 games. The sophomore center is tops in scoring and rebounding and third in field goal percentage and assists.

Not far behind is forward Dave Hillman, second in scoring and rebounding and in the top five in field goal and free throw percentages.

Tom DeBerry, among the top five in four categories; and Cal Wulfsberg and Steve Sinecock, listed in three, also have performed well.

Wulfsberg stands out as the assist leader: his 147 figure is almost equal to the combined total of the second through fifth spots.

Two reserves also have prominent places in the Vike statistics. Cartier Reedus tops the field goal shooters with a 63.6 percentage, and Mark Radford is way out in front from the foul line, hitting 13 of 15 tries for a sparkling 86.7 mark.

"I thought it was a joke," said Anderson. "I figures just two days after the Series it had to be one of the neighbors joking, but it was him."

Finley since has succeeded in keeping manager Dick Williams under contract. Williams had signed to manage the New York Yankees, but American League president Joe Cronin ruled in favor of Finley.

Anderson said, "I told him I wasn't interested, even though he did flatter me when he told me I was the first man he offered the job to."

Anderson said his devotion to the Reds stems from his promotion to manager in 1970 by Cincinnati.

"I came from nothing and I was given a helluva club. I owe everything to the people who hired me," he said. "I wouldn't leave Cincinnati unless I was fired. I owe them that."

Marshall OKs 1974 contract with Dodgers

Relief pitcher Mike Marshall, acquired from Montreal in trade for centerfielder Willie Davis, agreed to contract terms Friday with the Dodgers.

He did not sign a contract, deciding to study the document further, but he said, "I'm 99.9 per cent sure that I'll be playing for the Dodgers next season. There is nothing in the immediate future that indicates that I will not be pitching for the Dodgers, but there are other alternatives to life, and I'm still in charge of my life."

Dodger pitcher Al Downing reflected, "The addition of Marshall gives us a much more flexible bullpen. Now we have two stoppers (Jim Brewer, Marshall), and we won't have to wear out one guy. With the screwballs these guys have, they can get anyone out."

Marshall, 30, pitched in a record 92 games for Montreal last season.

Earlier, Marshall indicated that he was undecided on playing baseball or continuing a teaching career. He is working on a doctorate at Michigan State.

Girls who want to gain strength by weight-lifting can stop worrying. So can their husbands and boy-friends, for that matter.

Dr. Jack H. Wilmore of the University of California said he put 50 women and girls through a 10-week weight-lifting course and found that none of them lost their feminine form.

"Most women are fearful of weight training. They fear they may come out looking like Charles Atlas," said Wilmore.

However, although their strength increased, an average of 30 per cent, "the muscle size increase was imperceptible—they maintained their feminine form."

WASHINGTON REDSKIN quarterback Bill Kilmer underwent 90 minutes of surgery Friday for the removal of an obstruction that caused him to be hospitalized three times for stomach cramps during the National Football League season.

Kilmer's operation was termed "successful" and he will remain in the hospital for one week. He is expected to be fully recovered for the 1974 season.

CESAR CEDENO, the Houston Astros' outfielder jailed in the death of a young Dominican woman, is expected to spend New Year's Day in much the same way he spent Christmas.

Aprison spokesman said the 22-year-old Cedeno was "quiet but sad" on Christmas. "He listened to music and ate food delivered by his relatives."

THE FLORIDA state attorney's office filed 175 counts of gambling and bookmaking against 42 people Friday for allegedly taking part in a football betting ring that handled $100,000 in wagers every week in the Gainesville area.

Many prominent citizens, including former Gainesville mayor Howard McKinney, were among those charged.

GARDENING

By JOE LITTLEFIELD
Some lucky folks may have been given azaleas as Christmas presents. These fortunate recipients who may have tried to grow azaleas several different times but failed, should try again. But — this time the azalea should be planted in a hole twice the diameter of the root ball, but no more than two to four inches deeper than the length of the root ball. Plant is set out after water in the hole has soaked into the soil.

Mat-rooted azalea root ball should be vertically cut (through roots) all around. The root bottom likewise ... cut through the root-mat horizontally, then knead to loosen the roots. Immerse the root ball into a bucket of water with some vitamin B-1 added. Weight it down if it doesn't sink to the bottom. Take it out when bubbling has stopped. Plant it when water in the root has drained out. Dig some of the pre-moistened peat moss or a shade planter mix material into the hole bottom. Scatter bone meal or a fruit-flower fertilizer over the mixture then scratch in lightly. Put the planting medium in the hole and finger-firm it in layers. Top of root ball should be level with the ground when the root is set on the firmed material.

THE planting medium likewise should be finger-firmed in layers around the side of the root ball on up to ground level. A dam-like circular ring of soil is formed at the edge of the plant hole. Run the water close to the plant trunk at about 15 per cent pressure. Firm the planting medium more if the water disappears too quickly. The water should be visible for a short time before it soaks into the planting material.

An azalea plant, thusly set out lasts many more years than one that is carelessly and hastily planted. It absorbs much more volume of water when firmly planted. This means the whole root ball gets a thorough soaking, therefore grows happily. Azaleas should never get dry.

CAMELIAS are the main flowering debutants of winter blooming plants. These hardy shrubs are a bit different from the other winter bloomers ... those that bloom all at once, then a month or two later are through flowering till next year.

Fortunately camellia buds don't all develop and bloom at once. A percentage do. Later more begin to flower. Still later there are more that burgeon forth into blooms, then finish up the periodic blooming cycles within three months.

The Japonica type camellia blossoms last three days in water and even longer.

Camellias are not only for large garden plantings. They also can be grown in limited areas. The plants can be espaliered, which means the main branches are trained to grow out horizontally or fan-shaped and tied to supports to cover a blank wall.

The plant in a container can be trained to lath framework, then used to screen-out or fill-in certain blank areas. Apartment house dwellers who have a porch or a loggia can grow a camellia or two in containers. Home-owners can plant them in the ground or in a container or two.

Camellias bloom better if they get several hours of forenoon or later afternoon sun. They bloom in shade but grow slower because of more coolness and dampness. There are fewer flowers, they open slowly, and last longer.

Apt. gardening no hobby, it's a craze

Associated Press

Apartment gardening is not just a sometime hobby — it's a full-blown craze. But unfortunately too many green thumbs are suffering from the over-watering syndrome. Dedicated drenching kills a lot more indoor plants than underwatering.

Plants need air as well as water to thrive. If you keep the soil around roots soaking wet, air is forced out and your plant smothered and dies. Most indoor plants will perform best if you allow the soil around their roots to become almost dry between waterings. Real hydrophiles — such as ferns — will take a bit more watering than average, but desert plants — such as cactus — require less water than average. However, if you follow the practice of watering only when a plant's soil feels dry at the surface, you'll be on target with most popular indoor plants.

A different sort of watering problem occurs when a plant's root ball is allowed to dry out completely — and shrink as a result. When this happens the water you add to the container runs down the inside of the pot and doesn't soak soil around the roots. If you suspect this difficulty, completely immerse the pot in water and leave it until air bubbles stop gurgling from the root ball.

Avoid using softened water on apartment plants if you can. Water from softened municipal supplies is loaded with sodium and accumulates in plant containers, eventually causing leaves to turn black around the edges. If you cannot find a nonsulfonated water supply, occasionally leach your plants' root balls by letting water from a faucet trickle through the potted soils for several minutes.

This will wash out excess sodium, but it will also wash out nutrients. Remember to fertilize indoor plants on a regular basis, following fertilizer label instructions.

When you put a plant into a new pot, don't fill the pot to its top with soil. If you leave a rim of 1 or 2 inches, it will make watering easier; water you add won't run off before it soaks all the soil in the pot.

Gary Crosby a new man at 40

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Gary Crosby has survived the onus of being the son of a superstar, alcoholism, and the despair of unemployment to become one of the most popular and respected citizens in Hollywood.

Every step of the way was tough, despite the early silver spoon.

At age 40 Gary is a level-headed man, full of good humor and candor.

As he sat at a table in the Universal Studio commissary, hardly a person passed without a cheerful hello for Gary.

He has been cast as a costar in the new "Chase" series, removing him from the doleful line of part-time actors. His last fulltime job was in the old "Bill Dana Show."

RECENTLY Gary appeared infrequently on the "Adam-12" series.

"It feels good to come to work every day," Gary said. "Even at 5:30 in the morning it's great to have someplace to go. To know that people need you and are counting on you."

"It's been a long, long time. But I'm a survivor. When things aren't going well a man has to set his jaw and hang in there."

"I'm not complaining because I know there are millions of people in this country who have it a lot worse than I ever did. In fact, I've been lucky."

"My mother (Dixie Lee) left the four of us boys a monthly income when she died. It's still coming in. But I have to work to stay out of debt."

Taxes and inflation have diminished the buying power of his inheritance. But Gary is the only one of Bing's first four sons to remain in show business. Philip, Dennis and Lindsay are involved in other enterprises.

THE brothers see one another from time to time. They are not closely knit. Gary is the only one among them to remain married to a single wife. He and Barbara have been married 14 years. Gary adopted her son, Stephen, who is now 18.

Gary was an alcoholic from age 21-28. Barbara has been in and out of hospitals for the past few years. But they are making a go of it.

"I've got my head together now," Gary said pleasantly. "I recognize what psychological problems are now. But if I had to do it all over again, I'd never have gone anywhere near show business."

For most of his life Gary tried to excel as a singer, the specter of his father's fame hanging over him like an ominous cloud.

Nor has Gary encouraged young Stephen to follow in his footsteps.

"STEVE has seen me spend 90 per cent of my time sitting in front of the television set waiting for work," Gary said. "He's seen the depressions and the insecurities."

"Few young people see that dark side of show business. He doesn't want to be a part of it at all."

"Actors can't go out and knock on doors looking for work. That's what agents are for. When your picture crosses a producer's desk it's one of 40 actors all wanting the same job. It's up to one guy to choose."

Gary is optimistic. He hopes "Chase" enjoys a long run.

More importantly, the public may think of him as "one of the Crosby boys" or perhaps "Bing's oldest son." But he says, "I know I'm an individual. I have my own identity, and every human being is entitled to that."

The Man Who Sold Hot Dogs:

An I.P.-T Parable

There once was a man who lived by the side of the road and sold hot dogs. In fact, he sold very good hot dogs. He put up signs on the highway telling people how good his hot dogs tasted. He stood by the side of the road and called out, "Buy a hot dog, Mister?"

And people bought his hot dogs. They bought so many hot dogs, the man increased his meat and bun orders. He bought a bigger stove, too, so he could meet his customers' demands. And finally, he brought his son home from college to help out in the family business.

But something happened. His son said, "Father, don't you watch television or read the papers? Don't you know there's a big recession going on? The European situation is terrible. The domestic crisis is even worse!"

And the father thought, "Well, my son's a smart boy. He's been to college. He ought to know what he's talking about."

So the man cut down on his meat and bun orders, took down the signs he had put up on the highway, and no longer bothered to stand by the side of the road to sell his hot dogs.

And his sales fell almost overnight. "You're right, son," said the father. "We certainly are in the middle of a serious recession."

Advertising moral: If you stop trying to reach and influence your customers today, what makes you think they'll remember you tomorrow? Reach them today — in The Independent, Press-Telegram.

Show biz moments of '73

NEW YORK — How about some replays of Great Show Business Moments of 1973?

Starting with Charlton Heston. Dressed in black tie for the big Oscar party, he gets a flat tire on the freeway. Arriving out of breath, 40 seconds late, he chugs upstairs, hearing the voice of Clint Eastwood speaking his speech.

Another replay stars Carol Burnett. Fashionably gowned, she's accepting her Entertainer of the Year award from the Friars at the Waldorf. Without warning, Harvey Korman hits her squarely in the face with a pie.

Don Rickles, starring in the Copacabana's last year, blasts out, "Alan King's over there and he's so happy I don't want to break the news to him that McGovern lost."

Dean Martin, opening the Grand Hotel in Las Vegas, says his ex-partner Jerry Lewis is directing now, and adds: "He couldn't direct traffic."

THE Sunday night in May when Toots Shor gave himself a 70th birthday party charging guests $100, raising about $32,000.

Another night a few months later when Bob Considine and I watched, as Toots — who was closing next day — ordered his bartender to throw out one of the five remaining customers.

Another replay I'd enjoy would be of the April night scene when Vice President Spiro Agnew, his wife and his daughter, enthusiastically applauded black star Ethel Emsis' songs at the Plaza Persian Room — except one — about growing marijuana.

How about the Gay Libs tipping me they were invading the Rainbow

Grill? Getting up to dance, the usual way, they then switched, man with man, woman with woman, a homosexual breakthrough, they said. History being made and the other customers just smiled.

Mamie Van Doren dinner-partnering at the White House with Henry Kissinger. The future secretary of state showing her Nixon's office and desk, Mamie gasping, "Doesn't he keep his desk clean!" (Nobody thought to say, "He erased it.")

Glamour nights. Debbie Reynolds and soon-to-be ex-husband Harry Karl sweeping into Sardi's after "Irene" opened the new Minskoff Theater... thence to Raffles where Debbie basked in the smiles of Mayor Lindsay while her daughter Carrie, 16, fabricated an announcement of her "engagement."

Two weeks later Debbie valiantly arrives at Americana party after the Tony awards to congratulate Glynis Johns of "Little Night Music" who beat her for Best Actress.

THERE should be a replay of Mayor Lindsay going on stage for several minutes for look-alike Ken Howard in "Seesaw" and for the Mayor's recent bowout party when he sang and danced... of Liza Minnelli and Joel Grey sweeping up Oscar, a Tony, an Emmy, and yes, a Joey (Heatherton, that is).

These are just happy recollections. As Hermione Gingold said when she didn't win, "The awards." It was she also who said, "Nobody should get married till they're 35 and then only with the consent of their children." THE MIDNIGHT EARL. Josephine Baker (com-

I'd Rather Be Light

Today's Best Laugh: Some secretaries really disgrace themselves at the office Christmas party—but that, said an executive, is one way to get a raise.

Wish I'd Said That: Louis Jourdan, who once co-starred with Liz Taylor, said, "Playing opposite Miss Taylor is like counting your money—you never get tired of doing it."

Remembered Quote: "Only in America can a man show off his success by the amount of money he owes the government."

Earl's Pearls: Think of all the trouble Pres. Nixon could have saved himself (says Richard Rayburn) if he'd assigned Rose Mary Woods to be Martha Mitchell's secretary—and she erased everything Martha said.

N.Y.C. Mayor Lindsay leaves office next week, and a Republican sighed, "Well, another actor out of work." That's earl, brother.

ing into the Palace) asked Bricktop to join her opening a NY nightclub... Burgess Meredith's already being touted for a 1975 Oscar as Best Supporting Actor in "The Day of the Locust." He's here to direct Zero Mostel in "Ulysses in Nighttown" ... Leigh Adams Bennett, wife of Bobby Bennett, former mgr. of Gallagher's 33, sent out hundreds of notices she'd be on a "Marcus Welby" New Year's. And then they switched it to Christmas night... Naura Hayden is romancing with her manager ally, Martin Heller.

"Veronica's Room" is to let; the show closes

Saturday... Maureen O'Sullivan busted an ankle in London... MGM's "That's Entertainment" — clips from its famous musicals—will be released in '74, but shows this week to qualify it for an Oscar.

The Paul McCartneys were at Romeo Salta's en route to London... Connie Stevens bought the late Sonja Henie's Holmby Hills estate... Flip Wilson may do a two-week stint at the Palace, a la Bette Midler... Sergio Mendes was threatened with kidnapping in Mexico City... Porno pic star Georgina Spelvin will open Jan. 8 in a musical show at the Village Gate.

Train riders tell of crash

ANDERSON (AP) — "It seemed so unreal, like a nightmare," murmured a shaken housewife as she recalled the screeching of brakes, pouring of steam and tumbling of cars in the rainy predawn.

"All of a sudden it was just like viewing something on television — only we were in it," said Mrs. W. Don Miller, 44, of Lake Oswego, Ore.

She, her husband and two children were among the 450 persons aboard the Amtrak Coast Seattle-to-San Diego Starlight when the six rear cars flipped off the track, sending 84 passengers to hospitals Friday.

There were more gasps of terror than screams. Few panicked, many prayed. Some thought they were dangling over a cliff. One man said he had "a premonition of death" and was dressed, packed and waiting for the derailment.

Firemen hacked through the wreckage and smashed windows to rescue the pajama-clad passengers near this tiny community about 150 miles north of Sacramento.

The Millers — bound for the East-West Shriners football game in San Francisco — were asleep in berths as the holiday train sped through the snow-clad mountains from Seattle to San Diego.

At 3:45 a.m. the cars lurched, screeched and steel ground against steel. They were tossed out of bed, and their luggage and Christmas gifts showered over their heads.

A porter smashed open a door and the family crawled to safety. "The door was above us, we had to crawl up and down the hall," Mrs. Miller said at a hospital where she was taken for a checkup.

She said her son Mike, 9, with tears in his eyes, asked, "Aren't we going to make it to the game?"

"I thought maybe we were on the edge of a cliff," said Mrs. Maurice Schooley, 59, of Danville, Calif. "I said to my husband, 'Don't move, we might tip over.'"

Emmons Maloney, 22, of Kennewick, Utah, suffered a dislocated shoulder when his car rolled over in the darkness.

"My entire life passed in front of me. I said a lot of prayers," he confessed. "I figured we were up in the mountains, that was my biggest fear," he said on a bus shuttling passengers from the wreck to hospitals and local lodgings provided by the train company.

Judy Huchingson, 31, of Danville, her husband and two children were jolted awake. "Our bunks tipped to the floor and luggage and Christmas gifts fell over," she said. "All our presents are gone, but we'll get more."

But William Morehead, 50, was grimly prepared. "I had a premonition," the Los Angeles investor recalled. "I woke up. Something told me to get up and get dressed. I had my luggage and my money ready and everything."

"The train was going terribly fast. Suddenly I heard the explosion of the air brakes and I was thrown out of my seat," he said.

In San Francisco, Southern Pacific spokesman Andrew Anderson said "It appears the cause was a mechanical failure in one car, a failure of the wheel structure or something like that. But we're not yet certain, since the investigation is continuing."

Soap Box Derby may be washed up

AKRON, Ohio (UPI) — The president of the Akron Chamber of Commerce said Friday the All-American Soap Box Derby had become a victim of "cheating, fraud and hoax" and the chamber would no longer support the race.

James Gronen, 14, Boulder, Colo., won the 1973 derby but was disqualified when it was discovered he was driving a car rigged with an electromagnet which gave him a faster start.

Chamber President George Britton told a news conference here that the chamber had terminated all financial and administrative responsibility for the derby.

HOWEVER, Britton said if some other group or responsible business or organization wished to sponsor the race, the chamber would assist.

Drew Hearn, director of the derby qualifier in Charlotte, N.C., claimed the chamber was trying to kill the race with bad publicity. He called for a meeting of all derby directors.

"I do not want to see the derby leave Akron," Hearn said, but hinted he would consider moving it to Charlotte.

Hearn also suggested that the derby eliminate all monetary awards.

"Money only draws the cheater," said Hearn. Carl Day, president of Soap Box Derby, Inc., said the All-American Soap Box Derby concept has "grown beyond its initial concept."

"The original race was for kids — now the race is for parents," Day said.

DAY suggested regional competition to cut the costs of the derby race. By modifying the All-American concept, he said 15 to 20 regional winners could compete in the all-American race.

He doesn't expect the race to die. Besides, he added, "gravity-powered cars may be the power of the future, so let's not knock it."

Gronen's car was equipped with an electromagnet placed in its fiberglass nose with hidden wires running to the back, where they were hooked to a battery.

The wires were hooked to a switch in the head rest and when activated, the magnet stuck to the metal flap holding the car in starting position.

When the flap dropped, it jerked the car out of the starting gate.

Typhoid hits 23rd victim of fish dinner

MOUNT HOLLY, N.J. (UPI) — Another case of typhoid fever was reported Friday in an outbreak which has been traced to a fish dinner last month at a Burlington, N.J., church.

Burlington County Health Officer Walter Trommelen said the total number of cases is now 23, with two of those persons still hospitalized with the disease. The most recent case was not serious enough to be hospitalized, Trommelen said.

He said his department was still seeking at least 14 persons who attended the Nov. 3 dinner at St. Mary's Street Methodist Church but who have not been examined for possible infection.

Trommelen said more than 200 persons, including friends and relatives of those who attended the fish, oyster and potato salad dinner, have been examined.

Five other persons had been hospitalized after they were diagnosed, Trommelen said, but were later released.

INFORMATION on the comet Kohoutek is exchanged by its discoverer, Dr. Lubos Kohoutek, left, and the three astronauts,

Kohoutek, spacemen team in study of streaking comet

By THOMAS G. BELDEN
UPI Science Writer

HOUSTON — The discoverer of the comet Kohoutek and the Skylab 3 pilots, who have the best research vantage point for the streaking phenomenon, discussed their mutual work Friday in a radio conversation.

The comet zipped around the sun and sped back toward deep space early in the day with the pilots charting its path with powerful solar study telescopes.

Dr. Lubos Kohoutek of Czechoslovakia, who discovered the comet last spring, told the pilots their comet studies were extremely important in learning about the comet's origin as well as the origin of the solar system.

"It is a great pleasure to greet you as the first human beings studying a comet from outer space," Kohoutek told them. "Your mission is indeed very important for astronomy."

"It is very probably a new comet and so the determination of the orbit is very important," he said. "If it is a new comet it should leave some information not only about comets, but about the origin of the solar system."

Gerald P. Carr, Edward G. Gibson and William R. Pogue beamed back live television pictures of them sitting around the dining table during the conversation.

The astronauts, who passed the halfway point of their 84-day space voyage Friday, spacewalk for 3½ hours Saturday to take a closeup look at the celestial traveler with special cameras. They said they would keep a very close watch over the comet as it moved away from the sun.

"The brightness is certainly increasing," Gibson said.

The comet was obscured from the view of earthlings because of the sun's brightness. Its turnaround look it to within 14 million miles of the fiery solar surface.

One solar scientist studying data taken with the Skylab sun-viewing instruments said despite current predictions that the comet won't be as bright as first thought, the first or second week in January, "You'll still look out and say, 'wow, what's that?'"

"The comet should get brighter and particularly the tail should get larger and it should be a more visible object," said Dr. Ernest Hildner of the High Altitude Observatory in Boulder, Colo.

Hildner said the blazing ball of frozen gases and space dust should be about as bright as the planet Venus, the brightest object in the night sky, which was the most recent prediction of the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory. It will be seen in the western sky, above and a little to the left of where the sun sets, he said.

The astronomer said while it's not expected of comet Kohoutek, the same type of strange phenomena in the past "have been known to snuff out in a matter of days... and comets have been known to flare up in brightness in a matter of days."

Other than its mystical appeal, the most valuable information gleaned from the comet-watching has been the discovery of methyl cyanide molecules in it, meaning its point of origin in deep space is much further away from our solar system than first thought.

Scientists believe they can further explain the origins of the solar system by learning what the comet is composed of.

The crew sailed smoothly past the midway point of the mission in typical form, hard at work and rarely speaking to ground controllers. Flight officials said the odds were very good that the pilots, all making their first spaceflight, will finish the 12-week mission with no trouble.

Old spacecraft may pass through comet

MOUNTAIN VIEW (UPI) — National Aeronautics and Space Administration scientists said Friday that several of its Pioneer spacecraft orbiting the sun may pass through the tail of the comet Kohoutek.

It would give scientists "a rare opportunity to take measurements from inside the tail of the comet," a spokesman said.

Three of the "Pioneer" series of NASA spacecraft will be "in a position near the tail" of Kohoutek during the next few weeks. Whether they will actually be within the tail is not yet known because the comet is affected by solar winds.

The Pioneers now in orbit around the sun have completed their original missions. But space agency scientists said instruments aboard them are still functioning and will return data on request from the earth.

Fat kids wanted in film

Teens pull weight for tryouts

By MALCOLM N. CARTER

NEW YORK (AP) — A cattle call, one hopeful lad termed it. He was one of hundreds of fat, freckled, skinny, strident, muted, fuzzi-faced or mustachioed teen-agers who responded Friday to an open casting call for a Warner Bros. film about pudgy kids.

"Have you done any acting?" director Jerry Schatzberg asked a 14-year-old fidgeting before his makeshift desk in a rehearsal hall.

"Not really," Lisa Dibek of the Bronx replied.

"Would you be too shy," queried Juliet Taylor, an agency casting director.

Eyelids fluttering, Lisa smiled, "I don't think so."

Schatzberg said he needed three fat teens to star in "Dinky Hocker Shoots Smack," a story of children alienated from their parents. One stuffs his face because his mother devotes herself to a weekly encounter group for former drug addicts.

"I'm not a fantastic actor, and I'm even less of a singer," a youngster with curly black hair was saying as he shifted from foot to foot.

"Thank you," Schatzberg told him, shrugging at the comment.

"If they've got it, they're going to put it right out front," he explained between interviews, which rarely lasted more than half a minute.

The youngsters, lugging winter coats and wrinkled resumes, camped on the wooden floor and lined up and down the block for a chance at stardom.

A 140-pound redhead from Union, N.J., boasted she's been fat all her life.

"I wanted to start at the Continental Baths," gushed Barbara Serle, 16, referring to the place where Bette Midler got her start. "Catch me at the Palace in 10 years."

Joanne Barry, 16, of Manhattan, said she had never acted but that "everybody says I'd make a good actress because I've got a big mouth."

After her interview, 15-year-old Susan Kim of Port Chester said she didn't know how it went.

"All I saw was bright lights, and then I was out," she lamented.

Her brother Daniel, 16, maintained that he showed up "mainly because she's here."

"Some excuse," his sister interrupted.

"Well, there's always the innate actor," Daniel conceded. Is he going to be the next teen star?

"No way," he grimaced, allowing that it was "an interesting experience" anyway.

Schatzberg said it would be several weeks before he decided who gets the fat parts. How fat, financially, has not been determined.

THIS HEFTY TEEN-AGER is one of hundreds applying for roles in a new movie about fat teens called "Dinky Hocker Shoots Smack."
